Landon Fled Nation's War On Poverty, Ickes Charges

Nominee A.W.O.L. From Fight on Depression, Says Secretary.

Speech Broadcast Throughout Land

Kansan More Practical Than Progressive, Foe Asserts in Attack.

Text of Secretary Ickes' address—Page 4.

Quoting frequently from past statements of Gov. Alf M. Landon, Secretary Ickes in a radio broadcast last night drew a parallel with his more recent speeches and charged that the Republican candidate for President "has gone A. W. O. L. from the war against poverty and the exploitation of the weak in which he enlisted in 1933."

In a speech full of biting sarcasm, the Secretary of the Interior charged that the Republican candidate had repudiated his promise to go along with President Roosevelt in fighting the depression, that he had changed his attitude on price fixing, and that his record did not coincide with his stand on civil service.

Ickes labeled his speech "Gov. Landon, 'Practical' Progressive," and charged that the Governor was more practical than progressive. The talk was described by the Democratic National Committee as a "major" political speech and was broadcast throughout the Nation.

Charges "Compromise."

The Interior Secretary said both the Republican platform and the party's candidate were attempts to "compromise what are in fact irreconcilable points of view." He charged that a "progressive coloration" was aimed at the West, while an effort was made to satisfy the financial East.

Relating to the demand of Landon that nearly all Government employes be put under civil service, Ickes declared that Kansas has no system of civil service, although the law in that State has provided for such a system for a number of years.

"The spoils system, in all its glory, has prevailed in Kansas under Gov. Landon," he said. "Money has never been appropriated by the Kansas Legislature to put the law into effect."

On the other hand, Ickes continued, President Roosevelt "did all in his power" to get through Congress a civil service provision for first, second and third class postmasters, and when he did not succeed he put them under civil service by executive order.

Turning to Landon's much-disputed labor stand, the Cabinet member said:

"He is for the closed shop and also believes in the open shop. If there were any other form of association in which employes could indulge, it is a fair guess that Gov. Landon would favor that also."

"A Paralytic Stroke."

Ickes described an oil conference in 1933 in which he said Landon made this statement: "Even the iron hand of a national dictator is preferable to a paralytic stroke."

"No one," said Ickes, "thought to ask Gov. Landon whom he had in mind when he referred to a 'paralytic stroke' but I suspect that it was the general belief that he meant Mr. Herbert Hoover."

On the same occasion, according to Ickes, Landon said:

"I desire to acknowledge, in a tangible way, the appreciation of the people of my State of the courage with which President Roosevelt has attacked the depression. If there is any way in which a member of that species, thought by many to be extinct, a Republican Governor of a Middle Western State, can aid him in that fight, I now enlist for the duration of the war."

Ickes continued:

"It would appear that Candidate Landon has gone A. W. O. L. from the war against poverty and want and the exploitation of the weak in which he enlisted in 1933."

In the oil conference speech, according to Ickes, Landon said:

"When unbridled competition is injurious to the public, a regulation of that competition should be permitted under governmental supervision."

Ickes commented that as a "prac-

Tugwelltown

Uncle Sam—Landlord Super De Luxe

By Felix Bruner.

Among the problems involved in the construction and establishment of a synthetic town, such as the Resettlement Administration's Greenbelt, in Prince Georges County, is the problem of what to do about operating and governing it after it is completed.

Greenbelt will be a town of about 4,000 population. It will have a fire department, utility systems, streets, parks and presumably a police department. The Resettlement Administration is delving into the questions naturally arising from the fact that, unlike communities that have grown gradually and solved their problems gradually, this "Tugwelltown" is coming into the world full grown.

All of the land and all of the houses, the bathing beaches, the inn, and even the projected beer garden, will be owned by the Government. The school buildings will be Government-owned. This involves immediately the question of taxes. The county and the State of Maryland would not be happy to see all of this property tax free—and legally they can not tax Government property.

Workmen lay concrete floor for Greenbelt grade school.

The Resettlement Administration says there need be no worry on this score. It has promised that when completed the town will immediately pass out of the hands of the Government and into the hands of a non-profit Maryland corporation. In return for the property the corporation will give the Resettlement Administraiton a mortgage, payable over a period of 60 years. How much money this mortgage will involve has not been determined. Certainly, it is not expected to represent the entire $7,400,000 that has gone into building the town. The difference will be charged off to profit and loss, or to whatever account the Administration is in the habit of charging such differences.

Corporations being taxable, even though they are nothing more than organizations set up for the purpose of relieving the Government of direct ownership, the State of Maryland and Prince Georges County will get their tax money, they have been assured.

Next comes the subject of schools. Greenbelt will have a 16-room grade school and a high school. Im-

A. F. L. Opens Rebels' Trial; Rift Widened

None of 12 Defendants Attends Meeting or Is Represented.

Council May Not Reach Decision on Ouster Before Thursday.

Fourteen men sat around a long table in a hot, bare room yesterday charged with the duty of determining the future of organized labor in America.

The 14 men were members of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor. They were the jury in a trial of 12 unions, comprising a third of the membership of the federation, on charges of "fomenting insurrection and rebellion" within the federation.

A prosecutor presented the charges, but none of the defendants was present and none was represented. The 12 unions are members of the Committee for Industrial Organization, headed by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America. The committee is operating without the sanction of the federation in organizing mass production industries.

Frey is Prosecutor.

The prosecutor was John P. Frey, head of the metal trades department of the federation. He spent most of the day presenting to the council documentary evidence of the alleged "insurrection and rebellion." He will continue his presentation today. At its end he will argue that the unions should be suspended from the federation, an action which will result in the most serious split in the ranks of organized labor since the federation was formed 50 years ago.

Hope that anything but such a split would result from the "trial" was dim. Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, who has acted as umpire in more labor controversies, perhaps, than any other man, said he had washed his hands of the situation. He gave it up as hopeless. William Green, president of the federation, who was presiding at the "trial," remarked that the prospects for closing the ranks of labor were "less bright."

It was considered significant that George M. Harrison, head of the Railway Clerks, a member of the council and chief advocate of a compromise, was not present. He sent a message to the council that the press of other business prevented his appearance.

As the "trial" opened a plan of compromise was presented, but it apparently will not be accepted because it does not include the only "price" upon which most of the federation leaders are willing to declare peace—complete dissolution of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Acting As Individual.

The proposal was made by Henry Ohl, president of the Wisconsin Federation of Labor. His proposal was that the federation drop its charges against the "rebels," that it work with the C. I. O. in organizing the steel and rubber industries, that the C. I. O. confine its activities to those industries, and that a nonpartisan committee be appointed to investigate the controversy and to report to the federation convention in 1937. This plan would have avoided bringing the controversy to a head in the November convention at Tampa.

Ohl, when questioned, according to Green, said the plan should be interpreted as maintaining the complete superiority of the federation.

A final decision of the council may not come before tomorrow or Thursday. Its apparent choice is between suspending the recalcitrant unions and another postponement of action, possibly putting the whole question up to the convention.

Some question arose yesterday as to whether all 12 of the unions really were on trial. Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union, informed the council that in joining with Lewis he was acting as an individual and not binding his union. Michael F. Green, president of the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers, sent a telegram to William Green denying his union was on trial.

Other organizations affiliated with Lewis in his independent movement are: United Mine Workers of America, Amalgamated Association of Iron, Tin and Steel Workers; Amalgamated Clothing Workers, International Ladies Garment Workers, United Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers; Federation of Flat Glass Workers, United Rubber Workers and United Automobile Workers. In all, the defendant unions have a membership of more than 1,000,000 men and women.

Rebels Claim 2 Cities in Strategic Position Near Madrid.

The Spanish Revolt.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull warned all Americans in Spain to "flee while there is time." U. S. warships continued rescuing Americans.

Rebel and Loyalist forces were concentrating in the San Sebastian and Zaragoza areas.

Rebel troops hoped to capture San Sebastian to forestall attack from the rear when the war turns again toward Madrid.

Loyalists captured La Zaida, near the northern rebel city of Zaragoza.

Rebels claimed Guadarrama and Navalperal, control points of mountain passes to Madrid and Torreldonnes, 12 miles from the capital.

Government warships bombed Cueta, Morocco.

Great Britain was reported to have accepted neutrality pact proposed by France; Italy's reply was awaited.

Loyalist militia, sweeping through confiscated churches and convents, seized cash and hidden government bonds.

Madrid Attack Delayed.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Aug. 3.—Loyalists and rebels tonight pushed the battle front of Spain's bloody civil war into the north, rebel troops withholding for the moment direct attack on Madrid.

The American embassy, warning that developments might make it impossible to provide ecurity for American citizens here, urged them to leave for Valencia while the railway was still open. Most of the 74 still using the embassy as a refuge elected, however, to remain.

Among those who departed for Valencia tonight were Mrs. Fred Walters, the Spanish wife of a Richmond, Va., businessman who has been a prominent member of the American colony here, and Issaur Gabaldon, former resident commissioner for the Philippine Islands at Washington, D. C.

Government forces claimed capture of La Zaida, to the south of Zaragoza, in a renewed attempt to quell that center of revolt.

Rebels advanced toward San Sebastian, determined to rout Loyalists in that northern area and insure against attack from the rear when the long-predicted march against Madrid is begun.

10,000 Reinforcements.

Ten thousand troops from Pamplona reinforced Gen. Emilio Mola's rebel forces for the San Sebastian encounter. Mist and fog halted artillery fire for the day and limted action to brief guerrilla encounters.

While troops massed in the northern area for what promised to be major battles tomorrow, smaller rebel forces left to maintain positions in the mountains claimed capture of Guadarrama City and Navalperal.

These two cities were regarded as control points of two of the three passes leading to the Spanish capital from the north. The rebels also claimed capture of Torrelodonnes, 12 miles from the city.

Reports reaching Madrid said the town of Pina, in Zaroga Province was laid in ruins by government troops and most of its residents killed after a desperate two-day battle.

Ambulances Fired On

The reports charged those fleeing Pina with firing on Loyalist Red Cross ambulances.

The Zaragoza city is considered a strategic point along the rebel line of advance from Aragon toward the capital. Two fresh columns of government militia left Barcelona for Caspe to tighten the network for a new advance on Zaragoza, but insurgents were holding that city under heavy fire.

Another column took Sastago Pueblo in the same vicinity.

According to government reports Loyalist airplanes again bombarded Palma, capital of Mallorca, in the Balearic Islands, causing heavy damage. They said loyal troops attacking Huesca, capital of the Province of Huesca, shelled the city with artillery and that capture of rebel strongholds there was imminent.

The Madrid government wireless station announced arrest of the Bishop of Jaen. He and some of his

Roosevelt Aids Ready to Open Drive at Once

Farley, Other Leaders Talk With President at Hyde Park.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 3.—The Democratic National Committee today obtained President Roosevelt's official approval of arrangements to start immediately an "aggressive campaign" for his re-election.

After a two-hour round-table discussion of current political conditions, National Committee Chairman James A. Farley told reporters:

"I reported that we are prepared to conduct an aggressive campaign from now until November. We are not losing any time. 'We're ready to go.'"

Stephen T. Early, one of the Roosevelt secretaries, said the President had approved these arrangements.

Discusses Drought.

Acting as spokesman for committee officials and other political advisers who met with the President for two hours in the seclusion of the library of his home here, Farley said campaign plans had not been discussed down to minor details, but only in a general way, and that there was no talk of when or to what extent the President personally would plunge into the drive.

For nearly an hour, Early said, the President talked over the drought situation with Secretary Wallace and Chester Davis, former AAA administrator, and as a result Mr. Roosevelt may advance the time for a projected personal survey of the effects of the drought in several States and the progress of steps under way to help farmers in the stricken area.

That would mean, Early said, that a swing through regions in Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York and Connecticut swept by floods last spring would be "somewhat postponed."

The President, he said, expects to board a train for Washington Sunday night and remain in the Capital

Landon to Talk At Party Rally In N. Y. Oct. 29

Governor, in Radio Speech, Urges Action to Save Kansas Livestock.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 3.—Gov. Alf M. Landon will speak at a Republican rally at Madison Square Garden here October 29, it was announced today by Kenneth F. Simpson, New York County Republican leader.

Urges Practical Plans.

Topeka, Kans., Aug. 3.—Kansas businessmen were urged by Gov. Alf M. Landon today "to work out practical plans" for co-operation with farmers in saving valuable livestock herds in drought areas.

In a radio talk, sandwiched in between political conferences and a discussion of farm problems with National Grange officials, the Governor said:

"We have always been a self-reliant people in Kansas. * * * An acute feed shortage on a livestock farm demands prompt action. * * * It is my hope and belief that it will not be necessary to sacrifice any large number of valuable breeding animals in sending them to market. * * *

"I want to call the attention of the businessmen, of the local chambers of commerce and other civic organizations to the opportunity they now have to render a service, not only to their neighbors but to themselves. * * *

"Livestock has always been regarded as the best farm collateral. * * * If recovery is unimpaired there should be a good market and good prices for livestock next year. This is one of the strongest possible reasons for livestock men to hold on and for their communities to cooperate wtih them in holding on."

Before broadcasting over a State network, the Republican Presidential candidate canvassed the political situation with Senators Townsend (Republican), Delaware, and Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, and Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., who seeks the Republican Senatorial nomination in Massachusetts. Agricultural affairs were discussed by a conference with Louis J. Taber, master of the Grange.

FDIC Reports Its Net Profit At $6,561,000

$28,927,667 Assessments Bring Surplus to Total of $34,482,000.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation yesterday reported it had paid all expenses thus far from income on its investments, with a profit of $6,561,000 left over.

This was done, it said, without dipping into assessments collected from insured banks, amounting to $28,927,667, which have been combined with the profit figure and listed as $34,482,000 surplus.

The figures, covering the entire period of Federal deposit insurance, were presented in a report to the member banks. Since August 23, 1935, when the present permanent insurance fund was instituted, income from investments has totaled $7,672,257 and expenses $6,936,371.

For the entire period, $9,943,085 was paid to depositors in closed banks or such payments were pending June 30. They went to the customers of 60 banks and covered all but one-half of 1 per cent of all depositors.

"Only 306 depositors out of 66,000 were not fully covered by insurance," the report said.

The corporation insures all deposits made to banks which comprise its membership to a maximum of $5,000 for each individual. Depositors with more than that amount on deposit are protected to the extent of $5,000 only.

Seeking to eliminate unsound banks, the corporation said it had made loans of $7,482,242 and purchases of assets amounting to $428,912 "in the facilitation of mergers and consolidations of 12 insured banks with deposits of $17,889,000."

An estimated loss of $3,238,000 on these items was said to have been "substantially less than the loss to the FDIC would have been had banks been allowed to fail."

Mercury Hits 95; Showers Due Today

Autumnal temperature departed abruptly from Washington yesterday, when the mercury climbed to a sizzling maximum of 95 degrees at 3:50 p. m.

This was the highest recorded here since July 15, when the mercury reached a peak of 96.

One Washingtonian was felled by the heat. He was James Montgomery, 30, of 235 Eighth street northeast, who collapsed on Nichols avenue southeast, near St. Elizabeth's Hospital. He was transferred to Casualty Hospital, where physicians described his condition as serious.

Hot weather suits appeared generally once more, and the sunseared grass and sidewalks. Yesterday afternoon was partially cloudy.

Today, the forecaster said, will be mostly cloudy, followed by probable showers in the afternoon or night.

Susan Anthony Stamp Goes on Sale Aug. 26

The new postage stamp honoring Susan B. Anthony will go on sale at the Washington Post Office August 26, the Postoffice Department announced yesterday.

The stamp will be available for sale at other postoffices throughout the country on the following day or as soon thereafter as production will permit. It is of the ordinary size, and is printed in purple and stamped with a bust of the famous woman suffrage leader.

Husband Condoned Friendship For Kaufman, Says Miss Astor

Actress Testifies of Conversation With Dr. Thorpe Regarding Relationship With Dramatist; John Barrymore Linked to Case.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Aug. 3.—Mary Astor, film actress, testified today she once told her divorced husband, Dr. Franklyn Thorpe, he was aware of her relationship with George Kaufman, dramatist, and condoned it.

"You know George Kaufman has nothing to do with this divorce. You knew about George Kaufman and me since last September. Since that time we (Dr. Thorpe and herself) have lived together as man and wife and in that way you have condoned our action," Miss Astor testified she had told her former husband.

The statement was in reply to a question of Joseph Anderson, counsel for Dr. Thorpe, if she ever had a discussion with her husband concerning a visit he paid to Kaufman in a Beverly Hills hotel.

The startling bit of testimony came shortly after Miss Astor, who is suing to get complete custody of her daughter, Marlyn, 4, testified any love she had for Kaufman did not motivate her in letting Dr. Thorpe get an uncontested divorce from her last year.

Court was adjourned at this point until next Monday.

The name of John Barrymore was brought into the case earlier this afternoon when Michael Narlian, attorney for Dr. Thorpe, said he would subpena the screen actor as a witness.

"Her own statements make it necessary to let the whole thing come out now," Narlian said. "We will issue a subpena for Barrymore."

Kaufman, Broadway dramatist and movie writer, also is under subpena.

Miss Astor today testified Dr. Thorpe threatened her, that he once struck her, and that she was mortally afraid" of him.

Her remark that he "used a form of hypnotic control" over her was stricken from the record.

As Miss Astor completed her direct testimony, Marlian said "we had hoped to prevent all this scandal from coming out in court."

"We would have asked for a dismissal of the whole case on grounds of fraud, but we can't let it rest now without answering this charge of hers against Dr. Thorpe, so we are going to call John Barrymore—as a matter of fact, we are going to call a lot of other people next week."

He did not name the others.

After today, the trial will be con-

Cattle Bought By Government As Drought Aid

Stabilization of Prices Is Sought; WPA to Hire 89,000 Farmers.

By Robert C. Albright.

Fading hopes for the drought-blistered corn crop, and a 25-cent break in livestock prices, yesterday drove the Government into the market for the first time since the drought reached serious proportions, to purchase 4,793 head of distressed cattle.

Poised for several weeks in expectation of a slump in cattle prices forced by perishing herds driven to the marts, the Government moved yesterday to assure adequate feed corn for stocks that survive, and to stabilize prices.

The cattle will be slaughtered and processed, for later distribution to relief agencies, as was done in the 1934 drought, when 8,000,000 head of suffering livestock were purchased and killed.

Heat destruction of corn, which has claimed half of the total acreage in Missouri, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma and South Dakota, meanwhile carried to an 11-year high cash corn prices, which advanced nearly 4 cents a bushel at the start of trading.

The Works Progress Administration extended relief operations in the drought belt by authorizing employment of 89,000 destitute farmers in ten States of the Midwest and West. Already the WPA has put 40,000 farmers to work in

Army Officer Killed by Blow Of Sailor's Fist in D. C. Hospital

A retired Army officer, who served his country with distinction on foreign battlefields in two wars, met violent death in St. Elizabeths Hospital yesterday at the hands of a husky young sailor, less than half his age.

The victim—Col. Carroll F. Armistead, 64, U. S. A., retired—died a few hours after he had been knocked down by George W. Stephens, 22, former seaman, who was a toddling child when the colonel was leading his regiment in the Fourth Division in the World War.

Hospital officials told the police that Col. Armistead, a patient, touched the sailor as they were leaving, with other inmates, from the receiving ward to the hydrotherapy ward. The young man, described as suffering from an "interference delusion," wheeled and struck the colonel, who fell unconscious. Death came while the former soldier was still in a coma from a cerebral hemorrhage.

Army records show that Col. Armistead, when a young man, enlisted for the Spanish-American War, and became a captain. After long service, he was made a lieutenant-colonel when the United States declared war on Germany in 1917. He became a colonel while he was in France with the Fourth Division in 1918, and was honorably discharged because of disability on June 30, 1921.

Since that time the colonel had been living with his wife in Fayetteville, Ark. He entered the hospital last April.

Col. Armistead came from a distinguished family of Southern soldiers. Attendants at St. Elizabeths recalled that he often told them of a kinsman—Brig. Gen. Lewis A. Armistead, of the Confederate Army—who fell in Pickett's charge at Gettysburg after penetrating farther into the Union lines than any man in his division.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald will hold an inquest into the colonel's death today.

Chauffeur Seized in District Rooming House In '29 Murder of Benefactor Near Annapolis

Wanted for murdering a man who played the role of Good Samaritan for his benefit seven years ago, Henry Sanders, alias Bob Ferguson, 35-year-old chauffeur, was arrested at a rooming house in the 700 block Sixth street northwest by headquarters detectives late yesterday.

The murder was committed August 17, 1929, near Annapolis, Md., and the victim was George McClary, truck driver.

The arresting detectives were Thomas J. Sullivan, R. S. Bryant, Charles Warden and Herbert Wannamaker.

The story pieced together by the police at the time was that Sanders approached McClary in a restaurant, asking for something to eat. McClary, according to the police, bought him a meal and then allowed him to ride with him on the truck.

Some time that day McClary was murdered and robbed of $200. His body was found several days later, a bullet wound in the temple and marks indicating he had been clubbed after being shot.

A warrant for Sanders' arrest was issued shortly after the murder by A. Theodore Brady, State's attorney of Anne Arundel County, Md.

About five years ago, the Washington police thought they had Sanders trapped in an office building, but he escaped through a side door.

The Washington police were tipped off to his whereabouts here last week. They were watching the house yesterday when a letter carrier called with a package for Sanders. When Sanders went to the door, the officers seized him and took him to detective headquarters.

Sanders, the detectives said, told them he was at the scene when McClary was murdered and robbed, but took no part in it.

McClary, employed by a Baltimore meat-packing firm, was 35, married and had two children.

His body was found on a stretch of road off the Annapolis highway, 4 miles south of Glenburne. The police concluded the murderer had driven the truck there after the killing.

The stolen money was made up of sums McClary had collected in the course of the day.

No charge had been placed against Saunders last night. The Baltimore police, who conducted the investigation for Annapolis authorities at the time of the murder, were notified.

U. S. Is Inspired By War Threat To Boost Army

Increase to 165,000 in Size Ordered; Air Corps Program Widened.

By Joseph H. Baird.

Copyright, 1936, by United Press.

The beating of war drums abroad has inspired an increase in both the size and efficiency of the United States Army during the last year.

Although still small in comparison with the land forces of European powers, the Army has increased its strength from 118,000 to 165,000 men. More important, it is stepping up its firing power and mobility at a rapid rate and is building one of the most powerful air corps in the world.

Behind the building of what might be called this "new army" lies an interesting period of American military history. The United States always has adhered to the idea of a small, well-trained force in days of peace, backed by a reserve corps with some training which quickly could be expanded in time of war.

When Europe burst into flame in 1914, the United States Army was insignificant compared with forces across the sea. Even in 1916, when the first national defense act was passed, it numbered only 5,025 officers and 102,616 men.

But the armies established by the act remained largely theoretical. Right on the eve of America's entrance into the World War, this country had only 200,000 men under arms—133,000 in the Regular Army and 67,000 in the National Guard.

Then the world saw a military miracle. In less than 18 months, the United States had 3,757,624 men under arms—2,086,000 of them actually in France. In the great Meuse-Argonne offensive, 1,200,000 United States soldiers took part.

When it came time to disband this huge war machine and Congress began forming a permanent defense system in the amended national defense act, it provided for a standing army of 18,000 officers and 280,000 men. But, as the size of the Army always has been dependent on the money appropriated by Congress, it never has approached that strength.

While there seemed hope of disarmament throughout the world, the Army faced difficulty in getting appropriations from Congress. Then the breakdown of disarmament efforts, Japan's march into Asia, Mussolini's Ethiopian conquest and the general unsettled condition of the world appears to have changed both congressional and public psychology.

In late months the Army has been strengthened in these ways:

1. Its enlisted personnel has been increased from 118,000 to 165,000 men, a step which Gen. Douglas MacArthur, recently chief of staff, said would "double its combat effectiveness."

2. An increase of 5,000 in the strength of the National Guard was authorized by Congress.

3. The Air Corps has begun a program which will give it 1,000 fast ultra-modern planes within two years.

4. The enrollment at the United States Military Academy was increased from 1,374 to 1,960, which officers estimate, allowing for failures, will provide more than 400 new officers each year.

5. A general headquarters air force was instituted with a system for consolidating fighting planes from all over the country in a few days.

6. The Army adopted a rapid-fire shoulder rifle capable of shooting a clip of eight bullets as fast as a trigger can be pulled. It is expected vastly to increase the firing power of troops. Thus far only 3,600 have been issued, but eventually it will replace the Springfield as standard equipment.

Meanwhile, the War Department has drafted an efficient system of "industrial mobilization." Plants throughout the Nation know in advance what war supplies they will be expected to manufacture. They have worked out with the Army a plan of close co-operation. Even contract forms for purchases have been drawn up. Like a giant well-oiled machine, the system of purchase and supply will start grinding out materials if war comes.

Thus, at the moment, the military machine of the United States consists of:

1. A standing Army of 12,000 officers and 165,000 enlisted men.

2. A National Guard, the "second line of defense," of 13,370 officers, 201 warrant officers and 172,224 enlisted men, with an increase of 5,000 men authorized.

3. An "organized reserve" of 112,590 officers, of whom 91,955 receive periodic training. They are counted on to furnish the leadership for a civilian army of 1,000,000 men which, some authorities say, could be put into the field within a few months.

Statistics show, however, that this army is relatively small compared to that of other world powers. The following table gives a comparison:

Country.	Standing Army.	Trained Reserves
British Empire	390,291	632,053
France	600,505	5,500,000
Germany	426,800	1,850,000
Italy	1,111,593	5,214,368
Japan	280,000	1,895,000
Soviet Russia	1,185,000	4,500,000
United States	177,000	298,385

Meanwhile, due to development of the automatic rifle and new tactical theories, the General Staff is considering a reorganization of the Army little short of revolutionary. It would increase the lightness and mobility of troops and enable them to strike more quickly in the fast-moving campaigns of the next war.

'Never Again,' Sigh D. C. Youth, Rescued From Chain Bridge Cliffs.

Here are the four Washington boys who yesterday came to grief when they tried to imitate Alpine climbers and scale the crags near Chain Bridge.

'Fame' Prompts 4 Boys to Risk Lives on Cliff

They Save Selves Once, Then Climb Again When Cameras Arrive.

That cliff which rises sheer above the swirling Potomac 303 yards and 2 feet east of Chain Bridge is not Mount Everest.

Yet it so happened that four youths who admitted they suffered under the hallucination they were as good as any Swiss mountain climber tried to climb that cliff yesterday.

But they had to cling there until they had to cry for help.

They climbed until they could climb no farther. And then they couldn't climb back down.

Below rocks jutted from the Potomac's shore. Ten yards away the river swished through the rapids.

Until their fingers were strained and stretched from clinging to crevices and until their hearts had run a race with fear, the boys stayed there.

Yelled for Help.

There was nothing else to do except yell for help.

The boys were these four: Emmanuel Rapisardi, 1406 First street, southwest; Buddy Blanton, 19, 59 L street, northeast; James Berry, 19, 71 New York avenue, northwest, and Eugene Sanford, 15, 83 New York avenue, northwest.

Finally Buddy lowered himself to safety via a cable. Then he helped Emmanuel and James away from peril.

But they couldn't help James. James just kept his grip.

The District Rescue Squad rescued James, after the boy had spent approximately an hour at the top of the cliff.

Then the newspaper photographers came to the scene.

Back Up Again.

The boys' hands were still palsied with fear.

The photographers said they wanted to take pictures of the feat. The policemen had gone.

So back up the almost sheer wall they scampered again.

One of the boys paused on the way up and laughingly asked:

"Suppose we can't get back down again?" And the boys all grinned like they weren't afraid of the rocks any more.

Then they began their descent. They were nearly down when Buddy fell backwards and landed on a flat rock, made a face and promised the newsmen:

"Never, mister, never again!"

Charles M. Hull Rites to Be Today

Funeral services for Charles M. Hull, 79, of Glenmont, Md., who died of injuries suffered Saturday night when he was struck by an automobile on the Brookeville pike in front of his home, will be held today at 2:30 p. m. at the residence. The Rev. Richard Aselford, rector of Grace Church, Woodside, will officiate. Burial will be in Union Memorial Cemetery, Rockville, Md.

A native of Frederick County, Md., Mr. Hull moved to Glenmont community 40 years ago and engaged in farming. He retired about 12 years ago and had been living with his son, William B. Hull.

Political Arena

Baltimore Aug. 3 (AP).—The name of Representative William Lemke, Union Party candidate for President, will not appear on Maryland ballots at the election this fall.

Charles T. Leviness, assistant attorney general, ruled that the name coud not appear on the ballot because it had not been filed with the secretary of State 15 days before the primary, which was held last May.

E. Ray Jones, secretary of State, asked the attorney general to pass on the question. The query had been put to Jones by John J. O'Connor, secretary of a political organization supporting Lemke.

Primary elections in three States today emphasize the greatly enlivened politics apparently in store for the country during the month.

Virginia Democrats have only two contests of national import as they engage in ballot marking, the contests being in the Second and Third Congressional Districts. In the second, Representative Colgate W. Darden is opposed by Norman R. Hamilton, Portsmouth publisher, while in the Third a vigorous campaign fight will be settled by nomination of Representative Andrew Jackson Montague or Dave E. Satterfield, former Richmond Commonwealth's attorney.

Kansas, home of the Republican presidential nominee, also goes to the polls today in a drive by both parties to muster full strength for any psychological advantage there may ensue. The Townsend campaign, however, is expected to have its effect on party lines in the nominating vote.

Senator Arthur Capper is opposed for renomination by Walter Neibarger, Tonganoxie editor, and H. L. Stout, Fort Scott businessman. Four seek the Democratic Senatorial nomination—Omar Ketchum 1934 gubernatorial nominee; D. C. Potts, Townsendite; John H. Arnett, 1934 Congressional nominee, and Robert George, stockman.

Representative W. P. Lambertson is opposed by James B. Kelsey, and Representative Frank Carlson is in a struggle with William Schoen, Townsend supporter. Representatives E. W. Patterson and John Houston, Democrats, and U. S. Guyer and Clifford Hope, Republicans are unopposed.

• • • •

A challenge to the Thomas J. Pendergast Democratic machine of Kansas City is involved in Missouri's primary today. William Hirth, farm leader, the Associated Press reports, has waged his campaign against Maj. Lloyd C. Stark for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination with frequent attacks on Pendergast, who is ill in New York, but whose son is carrying on his political activities.

In the Republican primary, Jesse W. Barrett, former State attorney general, has made opposition to Pendergast his chief talking point.

Four of Missouri's 13 representatives in Congress are unopposed for renomination, they being C. Jasper Bell, Joseph B. Shannon and John J. Cochran, Democrats, and Dewey Short, Republican.

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—Dr. Henry Moskowitz, biographer of Alfred E. Smith and for many years his political supporter and adviser, came out strongly today for the re-election of President Roosevelt and Gov. Lehman.

He made the announcement at a luncheon given in his honor by the New York Manufacturers Exchange and Textile Finishers Association.

Selection of Mrs. J. Preston Davie, of New York, as director of a Landon "volunteer drive" in 18 Eastern States was announced today by Miss Natalie Couch, director of the Eastern women's division of the Republican National Committee.

Chicago, Aug. 3 (AP).—The Republican National Committee issued a statement today demanding that the President announce "what he proposes to do about the subterfuges that have been employed to build up the world's biggest propaganda machine at public expense."

The statement asserted the weekend report of the U. S. Civil Service Commission did not show "the number of Federal employes who are doing publicity or propaganda work," and added:

"This may be a matter outside the purview of the commission, but it isn't outside the purview of the President."

Chicago, Aug. 3 (AP).—John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, said today the committee was planning "the most extensive campaign among the colored race ever waged by the Republican Party."

He named five racial leaders for prominent roles. They were:

The Rev. L. K. Williams, Chicago pastor; R. R. Church, of Memphis, Tenn., a financier; Roscoe C. Simmons, of Chicago, who will head the speakers bureau of the new division; Mrs. Lethia Fleming, Cleveland, to be director of women's activities, and Robert S. Abbott, Chicago, publisher of the Defender, colored newspaper, named director of press relations.

Perry W. Howard, Republican National committeeman for Mississippi, will be general advisor to the division.

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 3 (AP).—Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald, Republican, said today he would leave tomorrow for Topeka, Kans., to confer with Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, Republican nominee for President. Howard C. Lawrence, Republican State central committee chairman, will accompany him.

Boston, Aug. 3 (AP).—The elephant will be more than a figure of speech in Republican circles in New England, the Massachusetts State Republican Committee announced tonight.

Tomorrow a baby elephant, 3½ years old, will arrive in Boston for duty at Republican rallies in the fall. It will come in on the S. S. Frankenwalk from India.

The animal will be greeted by New Hampshire and Massachusetts Republicans and will be formally christened "Susannah."

Waterville, Me., Aug. 3 (AP).—William A. Brady, veteran New York theatrical producer, in an address tonight before the Kiwanis Club, said the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin was "unfit even to black the shoes of the people he is criticizing."

"Just as the Rev. Burchard cost Blaine the election in 1884 with his ill-spoken charge of 'rum, Romanism, and rebellion,' so is this man maligning and insulting the President of the United States or the President-to-be," Brady said.

"I am a Catholic. My mother and father before me were Catholics, but I am ashamed for my religion and my people when they allow this person to continue through the country using his foul mouth. He is unfit even to black the shoes of the people he is criticizing."

Farmer Deserts War of Peeking On Nudist Camp

They Can Romp 'With or Without' Clothes, Declares New Jersey Man.

By the Associated Press.

Long Valley, N. J., Aug. 3.—Farmer Will Searles called it quits today and issued a ukase that anybody, "be they wearin' decent clothes or all bared, naked," could romp all over Schooley's Mountain for all he cared.

Thus did Will blow retreat in the war he had waged this summer and last against a camp next to his property.

Searles said they were nudists and he did his best to peek and threaten them out of his neck of the woods.

Those in charge of the camp, however, maintained it was a "health camp" where the ill and convalescent went to build up strength.

And that was where the forces of law and order—higher forces than Will, although he's constable of Washington township—entered the picture.

Those in charge of the camp appealed to Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, complaining Searles and the curiosity seekers he invited to his farm trespassed on the "health farm property" when they went out to peek. Gov. Hoffman put Sheriff Fred S. Myers on the job to see that the camp's rights were protected.

When Sheriff Myers and two deputies took their posts at the camp yesterday (Sunday being the usual day for Will's mass peeking forays) Will decided to quit.

He explained that he, being a constable, couldn't defy the soverign power of Morris County. He said he would "just have to keep my nose out of it and mind my own business from now on."

U. S. Spending Cut 50%, July Figures Show

Repayments by Alphabetical Units Help Reduce Month's Deficit.

By the United Press.

The United States Treasury struck off its July balance sheet yesterday, showing a cut of almost 50 per cent in expenditures compared with July, 1935, and reflecting repayments from alphabetical agencies whose private borrowers are beginning to retire their loans.

But despite the slashed expenditures and an increase in receipts, the Government is still operating at a deficit. It was $123,221,873 last month. However, this figure shows a drastic reduction from the $448,626,133 the Government went "in the red" in July, 1935.

The public debt, which stood at $33,788,543,493 on July 1, was reduced during the month to $33,443,795,237. In July, 1935, the Government started out with a debt of $28,700,892,624, which increased during the month to a total of $29,119,769,527.

Government income for the first month of the current fiscal year was $293,886,769. A year ago the July figure was $278,908,944. Expenditures this year amounted to $417,108,643 compared with $727,535,077 for the some month in 1935.

Slightly more than $250,000,000 of the reduced expenditures this year came from credits entered in favor of five recovery agencies, the RFC, the AAA, the Commdity Credit Corporation, the Farm Credit Administration and the Export-Import Banks of Washington.

The money from the AAA represented receipts from the sale of 600,000 bales of cotton and contracts for 1,000,000 additional bales held by the cotton pool. The AAA turned in $3,929,828. Last year the Treasury paid the AAA $7,779,697.

The money from the other agencies represented payments of loans made by the Government. The RFC turned back $175,572,576, while last year it got a July credit on Treasury books amounting to $4,863,094.

The Commodity Credit Corporation, to which the Treasury paid $115,863,270 in July, 1935, was able last month to return $87,213,993. The FCA, against its $2,627,810 debit a year ago, showed a $2,853,717 credit this year, and the credit of the Export-Import Banks amounted to $443,244 last month as compared with a debit of $2,589,649 in July, 1935.

Scout Master Dies for Killing His Young Wife

Sherman Goes to Death in Chair as Efforts to Save Him Fail.

By the United Press.

State Prison, Boston (Tuesdya), Aug. 4.—Newell Paige Sherman, Psalm-singing scoutmaster, died in the electric chair early today for the "American tragedy" murder of his young wife—the mother of his two children.

The 240-pound son of a village constable went to his death in silence, neither confirming nor repudiating the written and signed confession that doomed him—a confession which stated that he dumped his wife alice from a canoe into lake Singletary, at Sutton, and left her to drown in the murky waters while he swam to shore.

Nor did he leave any farewell word, so far as was known, for buxom, brown-eyed Esther Hall Magill, 18, "motive" for the crime, who was in seclusion at the home of an aunt in Worcester.

The execution climaxed a desperate eleventh-hour legal battle to spare Sherman's life—a battle that ended only after a futile appeal had been made to Justice Louis D. Brandeis of the United States Supreme Court at his summer home on Cape Cod.

The crime for which the 27-year-old Sherman was condemned might have been a "perfect" one but for smal-town gossip which linked his name with Esther Magill.

Sherman, father of two children, first met the dark-eyed Esther at the Whitinsville machine shop where both were employed. It was several months after he met Esther, according to his confession—and and after a lawyer had advised him he had no grounds for divorce—that he decided to drown his wife, Alice Dudley Sherman, 22.

The case became known as New England's "American Tagedy" because the modus operandi paralleled that of the slayer in Theodore Dreiser's famed novel, "An American Tragedy."

Logan Holds Lead In Kentucky Vote

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 3 (AP).—The result of the race between M. M. Logan and J. C. W. Beckham for the Democratic nomination as United States Senator from Kentucky hung in the balance late today, with Beckham threatening to take the lead on the basis of the trend toward him in the Third Congressional District (Louisville).

Senator Logan held a plurality of 2,559 over former Gov. Beckham in 3,945 of the State's 4,296 precincts. The totals were: Logan, 169,458; Beckham, 166,899.

Robert H. Lucas won the Republican senatorial nomination easily over four opponents. He had the indorsement of party leaders.

On the basis of votes cast in the two primaries, Democrats appeared to have qualified approximately 200,000 more voters for the November election than Republicans. Voters have until October 15, however, to register for the Presidential election.

The incumbent Congressmen—eight Democrats and one Republican—were renominated.

Hatchet Killers Tearful as Kin Visit Jail Cells

Fathers of MacKnight Girl and Wightman Talk to Young Slayers.

By the Associated Press.

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 3.—A sobbing pair of sweethearts—Gladys MacKnight and Donald Wightman—faced their fathers in their jail cells today for the first time since the hatchet slaying of the girl's mother.

Authorities, meanwhile assembled evidence against the youthful couple to present to the grand jury next month.

Edward W. MacKnight, a cable company official, spent 15 minutes with his daughter, 17, and both were in tears as he left the prisoner whom Chief of Police Cornelius O'Neill, of Bayonne, had called "the most coldblooded girl" he had ever encountered.

The calm which marked her early police questioning and arraignment Saturday had vanished before her father came, however. Her attorney last night had described her as distraught and sleepless and expressing sorrow "for mother and father, too."

Joseph Wightman, yacht club steward, was in his son's cell for an hour and a half. Young Wghtman, a rado religious hour singer, was described as "all broken up" when the father left.

Both parents were accompanied by attorneys and neither would comment on the interviews.

Daniel T. O'Regan, Hudson County prosecutor, ordered impounded the statements which police said Gladys and Donald signed, confessing that the boy held Mrs. MacKnight's arms while the girl struck her with a hatchet and then added several blows as Wightman stood by, saying "hit her again."

They blamed a quarrel over a late supper which delayed their tennis game.

The statements, only the substance of which was disclosed by police, were ordered impounded until presented to the grand jury.

The Hudson County prosecutor would not disclose his plans for prosecuting the couple accused of murdering Mrs. MacKnight except to say that if the evidence warranted when the case came to trial, he would ask the death penalty.

Week-End Traffic Toll 7 As 2 More Die in State

By the Associated Press.

Two new deaths reported to police yesterday brought the week-end traffic toll in Maryland to seven deaths. In addition, a number of persons were injured in other accidents.

Mrs. Mary Maranto, of Baltimore, died in a Baltimore hospital of injuries she suffered in an automobile accident near Catonsville. Her son, Anthony, was operating the car. Her husband, Frank, suffered a fractured leg in the collision with another machine.

Mrs. Maranto was the 242d person to die from traffic accidents in the State this year. During the same period in 1935, 273 persons lost their lives.

Mary Astor Testifies

tinued for a week in order to allow Miss Astor to finish work on a motion picture. An attorney for her studio told the court 500 people would be out of work if production stopped now.

"I am thinking of those 500 innocent bystanders," Judge Goodwin Knight said. "We will continue it for a week, resuming next Monday."

Miss Astor was the only witness, concluding her testimony. She said that in March, 1935, she and Dr. Thorpe had a final discussion about a divorce.

"He told me that unless I allowed him to get the divorce and the custody of the baby and disposition of the property as he pleased, he would scandalize me in the eyes of the public," she testified.

"He said he would blacken my name and the names of my prominent friends. He threatened to plaster it all over the front pages of the newspapers and wreck my career as an actress."

"What did you say," asked her attorney, Roland Rich Wooley.

"I said I thought it would be a horrible thing to do. And I said, 'If you ruin my career, I won't be able to support the baby, and you can't.'"

"Did he say anything about this afterward?"

"Day and night," she replied.

"You mean he repeated it?"

"Yes constantly, until the divorce."

"What was the effect of this on your health?"

"I was ill, heartsick. I was semi-hysterical going through all this, and I had influenza," she replied.

The actress, dressed in a natty, white linen suit, leaned her head on her hands. Her attorney halted for a moment. Then he said:

"Did you have any fear of Dr. Thorpe at that time?"

"I was mortally afraid of him," said Miss Astor.

"For what reason?"

"He struck me once and I didn't know when he would do it again. He continually got me in this hysterical state. He had a form of hypnotic control over me."

Row Over New Deal Blamed in Murder

An altercation over who received the most money under the New Deal's relief setup resulted in the murder of James Sexton, colored, 42, of 1308 Fourth street northwest, a coroner's jury was told yesterday at an inquest.

The jury ordered Eli Cunningham, colored, 48, held for grand jury action on a murder charge.

Witnesses testified Sexton and Cunningham became involved in an altercation over relief funds Tuesday night and fought with knives. Sexton died of his wounds in Freedmen's Hospital Saturday. Nearly 500 stitches were necessary to close wounds on Cunningham, the police said.

Red Plot Is Laid To Black Legion

Detroit, Aug. 3 (AP).—Wayne County Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea today said he had evidence that the Black Legion, foe of communism, printed and presented as communistic in origin pamphlets which called upon workmen to "kill the aggressors of the common people."

McCrea said the pamphlets also urged colored persons to "rise against your white oppressors."

The prosecutor said the printing plot was disclosed by statements of Audrew W. Fosdick and further statements by William H. Guthrie, Black Legion printer. Fosdick also told of printing membership cards for the legion. Fosdick's statement was voluntary. He is a printer, not a legion member.

Fosdick and Guthrie said Leslie J. Black, former judge's clerk, now held on charges of conspiracy to kill Arthur L. Kingsley, Highland Park publisher, ordered the cards and literature printed.

Woman Attack Suspect Guilty; To Die in Chair

Alabama Convicted After Husband Pulls Pistol in Courtroom.

By the Associated Press.

Anniston, Ala., Aug. 3.—A colored man accused of attackng a white woman was convicted and sentenced to die today after the victim's husband created a sensation by brandishing a pistol in the militia-guarded courtroom.

Judge R. B. Carr set the execution date for Friday, September 4. The jury deliberated 20 minutes.

National Guardsmen immediately started with the attacker, Roosevelt Collins, for Kilby State prison at Montgomery. Court spectators were required to remain seated until they had left with him.

The woman's husband, Joel Hill, Alabama farmer, produced the pistol while Collins was testifying in his own behalf. There was a moment of wild commotion as a State highway patrolman seized the weapon. It was not fired.

Militiamen hurried Collins into an ante-room.

Order was restored speedily and the trial resumed after Hill had been removed from the courtroom.

Hill drew the pistol as Collins testified he approached Mrs. Hill near her rural home, asked her a question and "she started walking into the woods with me."

The woman, as the first witness against the prisoner, testified he attacked her.

Officers did not know how Hill got into the courtroom with the gun. Everyone entering was searched for weapons, they said.

Local attorneys, appointed by the court to defend Collins, sought a mistrial on the sensational courtroom development but their motion was overruled by Judge Carr.

Father Charges Daughter Kidnaped; Trio Denies Accusations.

Three Prince Georges County youths, two of them 17 and one 18, were charged with kidnaping yesterday in connection with the disappearance of Jean Wallace, 14, of Riverdale Heights, Md.

When picked up on kidnap warrants, sworn to by the girl's father, George Wallace, a guard at St. Elizabeths Hospital, the young men said they last saw Jean in Brentwood, Md., Saturday night.

They told County Police Sergt. Ralph Brown and Sergt. George Giddens, Mount Rainier policemen, that she jumped from their auto at Rhode Island avenue and Bunker Hill road, after declaring she "was afraid to go home." They believed she feared punishment for staying out late.

Jean's mother, formerly a nurse at New York State Hospital for the Insane, admitted that when her daughter left for an evening's visit with Shirley Pavlat, 14, a neighborhood playmate, she had been warned "not to stay out after 10:30."

It was with Shirley that she met the trio of youths, one of whom lives in Mount Rainier and the other two in Brentwood. Shirley, who was caring for some neighborhood children that night, said Jean got into an auto to go after lemons to make some lemonade.

"When they got back she saw Mr. Wallace on the porch. She knew it was past time to go home, and I guess she was afraid of being punished, so they drove on," said Shirley.

The youths said they visited a "walkathon" in Washington, after which they wanted to take Jean home, but she refused. She did not tell them where she intended to go.

The young "kidnapers" were taken before Justice of the Peace Herbert Moffatt at Hyattsville. After a lengthy questioning by police, they were released on personal bond.

Ickes Attacks Landon 'Anti-Dictator' Role, Citing 1933 Plea for Oil Control

Kansan Called on to Explain 'Practical Progressivism'

Republican Candidate and Platform Described as Attempt to Satisfy Both West and 'Economic Hierarchy.'

The text of Secretary Ickes' radio speech last night, discussing Gov. Alf M. Landon, the Republican Presidential nominee, follows:

Gov. Alfred M. Landon has decided that he is a "practical" progressive. That this is the designation that he would apply to himself is clear from his speech of acceptance in Topeka the night of July 23.

Interested listeners wished that Gov. Landon had explained what he meant by the word "practical." Among the definitions of the word given in Webster's New International Dictionary are "available"; "useful or valuable in practice or action"; "capable of being turned to use or account."

A careful study of the record may make it clear what meaning Gov. Landon had in mind when he commented upon his own practicality.

It is a fair conclusion that the Republican candidate, like the platform upon which he is running, is an attempted compromise of what are in fact irreconcilable points of view. His party was in an unfortunate situation. It had to offer to the West a candidate and a platform that had at least a Progressive coloration, while at the same time it was under compulsion to give Wall Street and the economic hierarchy of America a candidate and a platform that would satisfy their reactionary demands.

So we have a platform that faces both ways upon which stands a candidate whom the West is asked to support because he is a "Progressive," while at the same time, he is entirely satisfactory to Wall street and the predatory interests because he is "practical."

Called an Advocate Of Rights of States.

Now whether Gov. Landon is 50 per cent "practical" and 50 per cent "Progressive" or whether he leans more to the progressive West than to reactionary Wall Street might be a close question if in his speech he had not himself thrown some light upon the subject. Note this significant language and determine whether it is the utterance of a true Progressive or of a "practical" Progressive. I quote from his speech:

"As a young man I was attracted to the idea of centralizing in the Federal Government full power to correct the abuses growing out of a more complex social order. When the people rejected this alternative I was as disappointed as anyone. But in spite of this rejection I have lived to see many of those views substantially corrected by the 48 State legislatures in their fields and by the Federal Government in the field of interstate commerce.

This language shows that our "practical" progressive began as a strong nationalist but has ended as an advocate of States' rights. It will be seen also that the Governor, in effect, is apologizing for having followed Theodore Roosevelt as a progressive in 1912. The language itself is obscure but the clear meaning is there to quiet the fears of the reactionaries.

It would be interesting if the Republican candidate would explain what he means when he refers to a "substantial correction" of "abuses growing out of a more complex social order." Perhaps he will tell the American people just what these abuses are that so satisfactorily have been corrected by the State Legislatures, whether the corrections really fit the abuses, and whether or not the abuses, if and when corected in one State, can step across a convenient State line into another jurisdiction where there is no corrective law on the statute books.

As Gov. Landon's friends insist, he is a "practical" progressive.

Landon's Civil Service Policy Is Recalled.

Let us examine other particulars in which the practicality of the Republican candidate stands out. Take, for example, the matter of civil service. The Republican National Convention adopted a civil service plank. But it was not nearly strong enough for the man who was to be nominated the following day as the party candidate for President. So he sent a telegram to the convention in which he took an advanced position on this question. Subsequently he called a special session of the Legislature of Kansas. Now it seems that Kansas has no system of civil service, although there has been a statute upon the law book for a number of years providing for civil service.

The spoils system, in all its glory, has prevailed in Kansas under Gov. Landon. Money has never been appropriated by the Kansas Legislature to put the law into effect. It has been another instance of: "Mother, mother, may I go to swim? Oh, yes, my darling daughter. Hang your clothes on a hickory limb, but don't go near the water."

It also appears that although Gov. Landon has been the Chief Executive of his State for over three years, he has never asked for as appropriation to give Kansas civil service. As the strong, forceful leader that he is represented to be, he probably would have had no difficulty in obtaining from the Legislature whatever was necessary to implement a law that was already in the books. Not withstanding this previous oversight, he could have included in the call for the special session a demand for affirmative action on civil service. But he didn't. He was as silent as the grave on that subject. And when a Democratic State Senator rose in his place and suggested that something should be done about civil service, the Landon partisans who controlled the Legislature accused him of playing politics.

Contrast Gov. Landon's attitude on civil service with that of President Roosevelt. The latter did all in his power to get through the last session of Congress a law putting postmasters of the first, second and third classes under civil service. In this effort, the Republican members, generally speaking, did not come to his aid.

When Congress adjourned without giving the President the civil service law that he thought we ought to have, he issued an executive order placing the postmasters in these three classifications under civil service. They will continue to be under civil service so long as he is President. And at the next session of Congress President Roosevelt again will urge Congress to pass this civil service law.

Gov. Landon is indeed a "practical" progressive.

The comprehensiveness of Gov. Landon's views is particularly apparent when we consider another important issue. He believes that employes have the right to organize by plant, by craft or by industry. He is for the closed shop and he also believes in the open shop. If there were any other form of association in which employes could indulge, it is a fair guess that Gov. Landon would favor that also. Certainly those great industries which, by fair means or by foul, have prevented their employes from organizing according to their own wishes, have nothing to fear from Gov. Landon's attitude on this question.

Revives Landon's Praise Of Roosevelt at Parley.

Among other things, Gov. Landon is opposed to a dictatorship in America. In this regard, he is no different from every other normal American. Following the lead of the American Liberty League, founded by the liberty-loving DuPonts, Gov. Landon pretends to see in President Roosevelt a potential dictator. I say "pretends" advisedly because I do not think that this "common-sense" candidate believes for a minute in this claptrap. But we must make allowances for him. There is a campaign on. Even if he cannot point with pride, we must allow him to view with alarm.

It is interesting to note the realistic shudder simulated by Gov. Landon at the pretended dictatorship aspirations of President Roosevelt. My mind goes back to an oil conference held in the Interior Department in the early summer of 1933 at the instance of President Roosevelt. Gov. Landon had been designated by the Secretary of the Interior as the chairman of that conference. He was not a candidate for President then. William Randolph Hearst and Wall Street interests had not discovered him. And he made a speech. In that speech he said, among other things:

"* * * Even the iron hand of a national dictator is preference to a paralytic stroke."

No one thought the ask Gov. Landon whom he had in mind when he referred to a "paralytic stroke" but I suspect that it was the general belief that he meant Mr. Herbert Hoover.

Gov. Landon also said on this occasion:

He's A. W. O. L. from War On Poverty, Ickes Charges.

"I desire to acknowledge, in a tangible way, the appreciation of the people of my State of the courage with which President Roosevelt has attacked the depression. If there is any way in which a member of that species, thought by many to be extinct, a Republican governor of a Middle-western State, can aid him in the fight, I now enlist for the duration of the war." (At this point the stenographer who took down Gov. Landon's remarks indicated that there was "laughter," but the laughter on that occasion is nothing compared with the laughter that goes up today when a deadly parallel between candidate Landon's speech at Topeka, Kans., the night of July 23, 1936, is drawn with the speech of Gov. Landon in Washington in 1933.)

It would appear that Candidate Landon has gone A. W. O. L. from the war against poverty and want and the exploitation of the weak in which he enlisted in 1933.

As the presiding officer of the oil conference in 1933, Gov. Landon had something else to say about dictatorship. Here it is:

"But if we can solve this question within the industry, I am willing to attempt to do it and give 90 days to do it, and if we do not do it, then I see nothing else but the iron hand of a dictator. That seems to be what we come to in all other lines of industry and finance."

Gov. Landon spoke as a "practical" progressive in Topeka on July 23 last, but on March 27, 1933, he spoke as a practical oil man.

Which raises the question whether a man speaks more sincerely, when he is a candidate for high office than when, without the lure of office before him, he says what is in his heart.

Gov. Landon now is opposed to Governmental regulation of industry, although so far he has been careful not to specify when, where or how. As in other particulars, he is content to rely upon generalities that do not even glitter. But, again following the lead of the Liberty League and the great bankers and industrialists, he is against so-called regimentation. He wants to return to the era of Hoover when free, open and unrestricted competition prevailed. Yet here is what Gov. Landon said about competition in his speech delivered at the oil conference:

"When unbridled competition is injurious to the public, a regulation of that competition should be permitted under governmental supervision."

Opposed to Regulation As "Practical" Progressive.

As a "practical" progressive Gov. Landon is now opposed to governmental regulation and control, but as a practical oil man the record shows that he has not only been in favor of such regulation and control but even of the fixing of minimum prices. He has also been for a dictator, at least so far as the oil industry is concerned. On July 17, 1933, the practical oil man sent a long telegram to the Secretary of the Interior in which he said:

"Federal control under present act is our only hope and if we are to be protected it will be necessary for a dictator to exercise authority in the premises and fix allotment to States, also pools within States, also storage withdrawal and imports."

The "present act" referred to approvingly by Gov. Landon was the national industrial recovery act, which he now severely condemns.

On August 12, 1933, Gov. Landon joined with the Governors of Kentucky, New York, Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania in a telegram to the President in which this language appears:

"To survive, it (the oil industry) must have minimum prices considerably above the present market. * * * For them (oil producers) to continue in business and co-operate in the industrial revival a guaranteed minimum price for crude, not only to cover the present costs, but also this additional burden should be written in any oil code."

It would be interesting if the Republican candidate would discuss his present firm stand against price-fixing in the light of this demand for it in the oil industry in 1933.

Telegram to President On Oil Code Is Quoted.

Gov. Landon continued to be enthusiastic over the operation of the oil code, for on June 4, 1934, he sent a telegram to the President in which he said:

"Improvement in market-price structure of crude oil owing to Federal control of co-ordination between States has meant an increased purchasing power to Kansas alone of $33,000,000 a year based on present prices as compared with distress prices of a year ago. * * * Unless the pending legislation goes through we are threatened with another debacle and collapse of this market, which, of course, will affect the price of coal also by reason of cheap fuel oil coming in competition. May I urge the importance of this legislation being passed before Congress adjourns."

The bill referred to by Gov. Landon was the one introduced by Congressman Disney, of Oklahoma, in the House, and by Senator Thomas, of Oklahoma, in the Senate. It provided for the strictest possible Federal regulation and control of the petroleum industry. Practical-oil-man Landon was in favor of Federal regulation and control and the fixing of minimum prices for petroleum until he became a candidate for President. "Practical"-Progressive Landon today is opposed to Federal regulation and control of petroleum or of any other product. What caused this change?

Gov. Landon in his speech of acceptance said:

"More recently, as a small independent oil producer, I saw my industry ask for Federal regulation because of a selfish exploitation of a natural resource, which, once wasted, cannot be replaced. When Federal regulation failed, the industry made progress in the solution of the problem by turning to State action, supplemented with interstate compacts, as provided by the amazing foresight of the makers of the Constitution."

Once again let us turn to the record. Prior to 1933 an attempt had been made to regulate the production of crude petroleum by an interstate compact. This had failed because several oil-producing States, including California, one of the three largest producers, had refused to enter into the compact. It was the breaking down of this attempted compact that made necessary the Federal regulation and control that later had the enthusiastic support of Gov. Landon. Gov. Landon knows this as well as any other man in the United States, and better than most, because, as the record shows, he never ceased to be a practical oil man even while serving as Governor of the State of Kansas.

Indubitably Candidate Landon is a "practical" progressive.

The "amazing foresight of the makers of the Constitution" permitted a compact between the oil-producing States in 1933 just as much as it does now. But Gov. Landon was not a "practical" progressive in 1933. Neither was he a candidate for President. He was a practical oil man and he wanted results. With a recent dismal failure of the compact method of controlling excess production confronting him, he was for strict regulation and control by the Federal Government. He said so in his telegrams to the President and in communications to the Secretary of the Interior. He offered to appear before a Congressional committee in support of a strict control bill. He had had experience in appearing before Congress on oil legislation.

It happens that there exists additional and conclusive evidence of Gov. Landon's views on the compact method of regulating and controlling a product that goes into interstate commerce. As late as January 5, 1935, he wrote a letter to Mr. Wirt Franklin, president of the Wirt Franklin Petroleum Corporation, in which he said:

"The compact-between-States idea has been agitated ever since Hoover submitted it to the Colorado Springs conference, and it is about the deadest horse I know, if there is a possibility of one dead horse being deader than another."

Compact-Between-States Idea Called Dead Horse.

Gov. Landon did not seem to think very much of Mr. Hoover as a statesman. I wonder how Candidate Landon feels on the subject. Gov. Landon pooh-poohed the idea of regulating the production of oil by a State compact. Now, apparently, Candidate Landon is enamored of the idea of State compacts. If oil can be regulated by State compact, why not all other commodities and interests that the States have in common. Then we could abolish, in large part, the Federal Government and revert to an era in which a "horse and buggy" candidate would feel perfectly at home.

In the quotation last made from Candidate Landon's acceptance speech appears the charge that Federal regulation of the petroleum industry has failed. This is not an accurate statement of fact. That it had not failed, but, on the contrary, was a tremendous success, at least in the eyes of Gov. Landon, is fully attested by quotations that I have already given from his various letters and telegrams.

If it is difficult to reconcile the views of Candidate Landon with those of Gov. Landon, it is almost impossible to reconcile the Republican platform with itself. This is the platform that William Randolph Hearst in one of his shrill editorials calls "progressive." Of course, Mr. Hearst has every right to expect his most trifling dictum to be accepted by abject Republicans as a pontifical utterance. And if he says it is progressive, who would be so bold as to question that fact?

In the same editorial he laid down the law to the effect that the candidates for both President and Vice President are also progressive. Well, who in the whole country, I may ask, has a better right to name the children than their father?

Whether Mr. Landon and Col. Knox are progressive or not, there is not any doubt that they are Hearstian. Mr. Hearst brought up Col. Knox, and he adopted Gov. Landon. Col. Frank Knox, the nominee for Vice President, whose self-effacing and temperate acceptance speech last Thursday night I hope you all heard, was for three years the high-powered general manager of all the Hearst newspapers, and his earlier candidacy for the Presidential nomination received more than friendly editorial notice in the Hearst press.

His Nomination Laid To Build-Up by Hearst.

Gov. Landon was nominated as the result of a Hearst build-up that made a national figure out of an obscure one. Of this, there cannot be the slightest doubt. One of the editors of the Topeka State Journal, the newspaper of Henry J. Allen, who at one time was also in Hearst's employ as publisher of the Omaha Bee-News, two days after Landon was nominated, wrote:

"With all due respect to the work of Gov. Landon's supporters and his personality and ability and to his natural appeal to the Nation, it was William Randolph Hearst who placed his name on the lips of the American people."

On June 13 last there was printed in various newspapers a syndicated article by William Allen White, who is probably as close to Gov. Landon as any man living. The title of this article was "How Landon won: The True Story of the Birth, the Boom and the Climax of Kansan's Nomination." From this illuminating article I quote:

"When the two private cars (carrying Mr. Hearst and his party) were parked in the Topeka switchyards, all Kansas knew that her Governor was beginning to be somebody."

Mr. Landon and Col. Knox may be as progressive as the not disinterested Mr. Hearst avers but if they are then it is a curious coincidence that the most reactionary individuals and interests in the United States are supporting him. For it must be admitted that these particular individuals and interests usually know their political onions.

Since when did the liberty-loving DuPonts, Andrew W. Mellon, Ogden L. Mills, Winthrop W. Aldrich, Charles D. Hilles, David A. Reed, J. Henry Roraback, Henry P. Fletcher, Senator Jesse H. Metcalf or John D. M. Hamilton, the latter an offshoot of the machine of the late Dave Mulvane and, until recently, the bitter antagonist of that progressive group in Kansas which now fawns upon him, show any except a malevolent interest in a real progressive or in a progressive principle? Can it be that Wall Street, the New York Herald-Tribune, the Chicago Daily Tribune, the San Francisco Chronicle and the Los Angeles Times, to say nothing of the Liberty League and the papers of William Randolph Hearst and other wealthy reactionaries, out of a tender regard for the welfare of the plain people of America, have suddenly deserted the special interests and have gone progressive?

Song About 'The Gang' Held Not Inappropriate.

While, so far as is known, it has not been adopted as the Republican campaign song, it was not inappropriate that on the occasion of Gov. Landon's acceptance speech in Topeka one of the favorite tunes of the band should be—"Hail, Hail, The Gang's All Here."

If those whom I have just named are satisfied with a platform or a candidate, then it behooves us average Americans to wonder why and to investigate the inside of the wooden horse with the greatest possible care. On the other hand, if they bitterly oppose a candidate then the chances are that that is the candidate the people ought to support. To my mind, it is a real tribute to President Roosevelt that he should have won the bitter enmity of such men as I have referred to. He must have struck some mighty blows in behalf of the people to have called forth the hymns of hate that have been chanted against him by the economic royalists and the malefactors of great wealth, if we may borrow a striking phrase of the late Theodore Roosevelt's.

Hearst Called Parvenu Of Republican Party.

It is indeed fortunate that if Gov. Landon is a progressive at all, he is a "practical" one. Who can doubt that it takes the highest degree of practicality to drive a four-in-hand made up of William Randolph Hearst, William Allen White, Gifford Pinchot and a DuPont selected at random?

William Randolph Hearst, upon taking over the control of the Republican Party, may expand upon the progressiveness of that party's candidates and platform, but Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, does not agree with him. Compared with Dr. Butler, Mr. Hearst is a mere parvenu in the Republican Party. He has not yet warmed the chair that he has usurped. The members of his adopted family are still a little nervous about his table manners. They are a bit afraid that he may want more than his fair share of the good things of the board. He always has. On the other hand, Dr. Butler is a life-long Republican. He has occupied many positions of honor and trust in his party. He was a candidate for Vice President on the Republican ticket in 1912, and he had support for the nomination for President at the 1920 convention. On July 15 last, according to the Associated Press, Dr. Butler denounced the 1936 convention as "the most reactionary in the party's entire history."

William Allen White, in his rapturous eulogies of the Republican candidate for President, eulogies which, if read with a cold and appraising eye, give not one single reason why Mr. Landon should be elected on the basis of his qualifications, chants as a refrain that "Landon is a progressive." The proof of this, according to Mr. White, lies in the fact that Mr. Landon cast his first vote for Theodore Roosevelt in 1912 and has been aligned with the progressive group in Kansas since that date.

These facts do not prove Mr. Landon to be a progressive. Moreover, in his speech of acceptance, as has been seen, Gov. Landon goes down on his knees at the mourners' bench to ask forgiveness for his temporary aberration in 1912. Little did he dream then that Wall Street and the Liberty League would one day take him to the top of a high mountain and promise him all the kingdoms of the world.

To a Beauty Parlor To Have Its Face Lifted.

Now he is for laissez faire. He would turn the clock back to the era of "Hoover prosperity." He even promises, as did Harding, to surround himself with "best minds." We see him accepting a nomination which, by no stretch of the imagination, could have been his if it had not been for the support of the most reactionary elements in the country. Does this prove him to be a progressive? We behold him adopting and indorsing an ambiguous, tricky platform written by a group that was dominated by the reactionaries. Was this the act of a progressive?

The most that can be said for the Republican Party is that it has been to a beauty parlor to have its face lifted. But a face-lifting does not make a new personality; it merely gives temporarily a more pleasing appearance to an old face. There has been no character-lifting in the Republican Party. It still suffers from soul erosion. It has merely attempted to take on the verisimilitude of progressivism in order to fool and betray the people. Concentrated wealth, the pwer of money, still dominates the Republican Party. If you doubt this statement count noses and see in which political camp the great bankers, the monopolistic industrialists and the vested interests that have been built up by Republican favor and which flourish on special privilege, have pitched their tents.

Even Gov. Landon does not now claim that he is a Progressive. The only sop that he can throw to the Progressive West is that he is a "practical" Progressive. Whatever he may mean by the word "practical," the term seems to be understood by and entirely satisfactory to those other eminently "practical" men who, until March 4, 1933, held in their selfish and cruel grasp the economic power and, therefore, the political and social destiny of America.

Only the unintelligent or the wilfully blind can fail to see the real issue that must be decided at the polls in November.

It ought not to be necessary to point out that that man is to be avoided, who, openely or secretly, is being supported by the men who ruthlessly wield the money power of America. These men know what they want and it is seldom that they do not know how to get what they want. Their allegience in this campaign is known and there has been no denial of that allegiance. It is the same crowd through which there was circulated some months ago the slogan: "Let's gang up on Roosevelt." The people should beware of mortgaging their government, now that they have redeemed it at last from the grip of these cold, heartless and exploiting men, to anyone whose repudiation of the money power has not been attested by outpourings of the hate of that same money power.

Gov. Landon cannot at the same time be the candidate of the exploiting and of the explointed. Not even a "practical" progressive ought to be able to run with the hares and hunt with the hounds.

Criticizes Landon's Statements

Ickes Upbraids Landon

tical" Progressive, "Gov. Landon is now opposed to Government regulation and control."

"But," he added, "as a practical oil man the record shows that he has not only been in favor of such regulation and control, but even of the fixing of minimum prices."

The Secretary said that on August 12, 1933, the Kansas Governor joined with the Governors of Kentucky, New York, Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania in a telegram to the President which included this language:

"A Practical Oil Man."

"To survive, it (the oil industry) must have minimum prices considerably above present market * * * For them (oil producers) to continue in business and co-operate in the industrial revival a guaranteed minimum price for crude not only to cover present costs but also this additional burden should be written in any oil code."

Ickes' comment on this was:

"It would be interesting if the Republican candidate would discuss his present firm stand against price-fixing in the light of his demand for it in the oil industry in 1933."

Ickes remarked that Landon "never ceased to be a practical oil man even while serving as Governor of Kansas." He charged Landon once had opposed State compacts for the regulation of oil production and that now he was for them.

"It is difficult," Ickes continued, "to reconcile the views of Candidate Landon with those of Gov. Landon; it is almost impossible to reconcile the Republican platform with itself."

"Curious Coincidence."

Ickes said William Randolph Hearst had labeled the Republican platform "progressive."

"Who in the whole country," he asked, "has a better right to name the children than their father?"

He declared that "Mr. Hearst brough up Col. Knox and has adopted Gov. Landon."

"Mr. Landon and Col. Knox," he said, "may be as progressive as the not disinterested Mr. Hearst avers, but if they are, then it is a curious coincidence that the most reactionary individuals and interests in the United States are supporting them."

Ickes said Landon, in his acceptance speech, "went down on his knees for forgiveness" for supporting Theodore Roosevelt in 1912. Ickes himself supported Theodore Roosevelt that year.

"Now," said Ickes, "he is for laissez faire. He would turn the clock back to the era of 'Hoover prosperity.'"

Ickes said the most that could be said of the Republican Party was that "it has been to a beauty parlor to have its face lifted." He added, however, that it is still "suffering from soul erosion."

"Gov. Landon," he concluded, "cannot at the same time be the candidate of the exploiting and the exploited. Not even a 'practical' progressive ought to be able to run with the hares and hunt with the hounds."

Quit Spain Now Is Hull Advice To Americans

State Secretary Indicates Evacuation Later May Be Blocked.

Secretary Hull yesterday warned Americans in Spain that if they wish to leave they should take advantage of present opportunities to do so, because conditions may arise making it impossible to remove them.

At the same time, he announced that diplomatic representatives of the United States in Spain have been advised of the desirability of evacuating members of their families.

Meanwhile, American warships still were busy in their work of rescue. The cruiser Quincy, after landing 100 refugees at Marseille, France, returned immediately to Malaga, where communication had been cut off and where it was feared Americans were in danger.

"This Government," Secretary Hull said, "is lending every effort in the protection of American citizens and to afford them means of evacuation from Spain. It appears that a number of Americans, for one reason or another, have decided not to avail themselves of existing opportunities to be evacuated.

"It is, of course, a matter for each individual to determine whether or not he will remain on in Spain, or whether he will avail himself of present means of evacuation. Irrespective of the decision of any of our nationals in this respect, the Government will continue its every effort to protect them.

"Our representatives in Spain are informing Americans in their districts that in spite of all the best efforts of this Government to provide means of evacuation, it cannot be assured that conditions will remain in such a state that American vessels may at all times be able to contact Americans who decide some time in the future that they want to leave Spain.

"Our representatives in Spain have been advised of the desirability of evacuating the members of their families."

The State Department estimated that 200 Americans are voluntarily remaining in Madrid and that the total still in Spain is about 500.

Besides the Quincy, the battleship Oklahoma and the Coast Guard Cutter Cayuga still are in Spanish waters ready to evacuate Americans who wish to leave. Officials have received repeated reports of United States citizens who insist upon remaining for business or other reasons.

The action of the State Department indicated an expectation that the Spanish civil war will be a long one. No explanation was given of the statement that conditions might arise which would make it difficult or impossible to remove Americans. The State Department, however, is eager to avoid any "incident" which might cause a misunderstanding.

While press reports have told of the seizure in Spain of property of American automobile manufacturers and of other American property, it was said at the State Department that no detailed reports of such seizures had been received.

Meanwhile, the Associated Press reported from Madrid the immediate evacuation of Americans over the one railroad line still open to Valencia.

Troops Massed in North Spain relatives were imprisoned in his cathedral. Loyalists admitted seizure of about 1,000,000 pesetas (nominally about $130,000) belonging to the Bishop's sister 8,000,000 pesetas ($1,000,000) from the Bishop's palace.

Complete Authority.

The government asserted it held complete authority in Madrid and that construction employes had returned to work. Officials declared no reports of military movements henceforth would be announced except those of definite government victories.

Loyalist forces, increased by enlistments from nearby rural provinces, surged into the jagged mountains in another effort to oust the foe.

Confidence of success was tempered somewhat by admissions time would be required to restore the nation to normality. But, the Loyalists insisted, "we will win in the end."

"We do not deny that when the rebellion first broke out, we found ourselves in an extraordinarily grave position," observed Julio Alvarez Del Vayo, Loyal socialist leader.

"Since then, however, there has been a great change. Many regiments have either deserted or imprisoned their officers and come over to our side."

Fort Is Bombarded.

Government warships renewed action in the Straits of Gibraltar with bombardment of the fort at Ceuta, Spanish Morocco, where the revolt began. The ships drew away to seek shelter behind a British cable ship when the fire was returned.

Other craft shelled rebel concentrations 30 miles east of Gibraltar.

(France indicated she might deliver arms to the Spanish government if her proposed tripartite neutrality agreement is not accepted quickly.

(Authoritative sources said Great Britain's adherence would be assured tomorrow, but that there was no indication when Rome's reply would be received.

(French fear of a new Fascist dictatorship if rebels are successful led to the proposed tripartite neutrality. France feared Italy might aid the Spanish Fascists, and this fear was heightened by appearance in Morocco of Italian planes.)

Transport Group Named.

Madrid, Aug. 3 (U.P.).—Confiscation of private property in Spain was accelerated by the government tonight when the ministry of the interior decreed establishment of a national auto transport committee to assume charge of the commandeering, control and distribution of all motor transport throughout the nation.

Loyalist Spanish militiamen dug into secret hiding places in scores of confiscated convents and churches today and seized millions of pesetas worth of government bonds and cash, while in the front lines their comrades fought bitterly against rebels battling for possession of Madrid.

The third week of the bloodiest civil war in Spanish history was marked by intensified Loyal aerial bombardments of rebel strongholds on the peninsula and in the Balearic Islands.

Loyalist warships unleashed simultaneous bombardment of rebel strongholds in Spanish Morocco while infantry and artillery battles raged at Oviedo, Zaragoa and in the strategic mountain passes north of Madrid.

Funds Are Seized.

Convents, seized for the most part by the militia in various parts of Spain, yielded $2,950,000. The seized funds were delivered to the authorities.

Loyalist militia at Almeria raided the cathedral there and found and confiscated government bonds worth 300,000 pesetas. They were hidden behind a painting.

The government declined to admit rebel announcements that they captured the strategic town of Guadarrama, 31 miles north of Madrid.

The war situation was virtually stalemated except in the region of Zaragoza and in the mountain passes north of Madrid. There, it was admitted, the rebels continued harassing attacks in hope of puncturing the Loyalist defense. But thus far, officials said, the attempts were fruitless.

Situation Desperate.

Rebels, it was admitted, continue to hold the Alcazar fortress at Toledo but their situation was described as desperate. Water was being rationed. Loyalist planes bombed and set fire to the Alcazar stables.

Madrid was quiet. Ideal weather prevailed. Pedestrians promenaded the streets but cafe life was badly crippled. Bull fights were suspended throughout Spain. It was expected there would be no more this season.

Government attempts to avoid destruction of cities and non-combatants were described as foiled by the stubborn resistance of the rebels.

Portions of Oviedo were in flames soon after Loyalist Asturias miners attacked the rebel stronghold there with dynamite bombs yesterday.

France Awaits Replies to Plea; May Help Spain

'Feels Free' to Lend Arms Unless Neutrality Is Agreed Upon.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Aug. 3.—France tonight felt "free" to move war supplies into Spain if her proposed neutrality agreement with Great Britain and Italy is not accepted quickly.

France does not consider herself bound in any way to reject Spanish orders for munitions, officials said, but prefers to enter an agreement with other nations against furnishing either rebels or Loyalists with any supplies.

Acceptance of the agreement, informed sources said, was expected tomorrow from Great Britain, but there was no indication when the Italian government would reply. It was believed here, however, that a favorable reply from Rome eventually would be received.

Hope for Accord.

Earlier, the French government had indicated a hope to augment the three-power pact, binding the great powers of the Mediterranean to keep out of Spain's war, to include Germany, Russia and other nations.

France foresees the danger of delay, informed circles stated, and added that some orders likely will be filled shortly if the agreement is held up.

The danger, it was explained, would lie in the possibility all interested powers might pitch in with supplies to sides they favored with the possibility of serious international complications.

"Our hands are free," one official said. "It isn't a case of just filling orders pending since before the rebellion. If the Madrid government telephoned an order for planes or ammunition today or tomorrow we are free to fill it.

Threat of Orders.

"This doesn't mean we intend to do so within such a short time But if assurances of a hands off policy are not forthcoming, filling of some orders shortly should not cause surprise."

The Leftist government of Premier Leon Blum has been decidedly frank in expressing its fear another dictatorship, added to those of Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany, might appear along France's borders.

Belief European war might result if the Spanish revolution developed into a Fascist-Marxist fight financed by other governments was expressed last week before the French Chamber of Deputies.

The appearance of Italian planes, allegedly transporting arms to rebels in Spanish Morocco, touched off debate and led to the proposed tripartite neutrality agreement.

Italy's Reply Waits.

Rome, Aug. 3 (AP).—Official sources tonight said Italy's reply to France's proposed tripartite agreement to remain neutral in the Spanish civil war probably would not be ready for at least two days.

Premier Mussolini was absent from Rome tonight and there was no indication from other sources what Italy's reaction would be.

Raskob 'Comfortable,' His Physician Reports

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—The condition of John J. Raskob, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, who was stricken with knee arthritis while vacationing in Yellowstone National Park, was reported as "satisfactory" tonight by an attending physician at St. Vincent's Hospital.

Raskob was taken by stretcher to the hospital after his arrival here by train earlier in the day.

His physician, Dr. Raymond P. Sullivan, issued the following statement: "While in the West, Mr. Raskob sustained an injury to his knee. His progress has been most satisfactory. He is resting comfortably and he expects to return to his usual activities in a short time."

Farmers' Hope Lies in Landon, Says Hamilton

G. O. P. Chief Challenges Administration Claim of Crop Service.

By the Associated Press.

Bismarck, N. Dak., Aug. 3.—John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, said in an address prepared for delivery tonight, that the American people took their first steps toward recovering "control of their Government" when Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas was nominated for the Presidency.

On the first leg of an aerial tour of 15 Western States, Hamilton chose his Bismarck address to challenge the Democratic Administration's claims of service to the farmers. Asserting Gov. Landon was nominated on the farms of America, the Republican campaign leader said:

"It is not surprising that the American farmer has turned from an Administration pledged to restore the American market to the American farmer that at the end of three and one-half years has the following record:

Gives Record.

"An increase in the volume of food imports amounting to 41 per cent in the case of crude foodstuffs and 49 per cent in manufactured foodstuffs, an increase in the imports of wheat from 3,000 bushels in 1932 to over 27,000 000 in 1935, and of corn from 344,000 bushels to over 43,000,000 bushels in the same period.

"A decrease from 1932 to 1935 in our exports of wheat by 99 per cent, of flour by 42 per cent, of lard by 82 per cent, and of meat products by 19 per cent."

Hamilton, referring to the Administration's reciprocal trade agreements, said the farmer was the most vitally interested party, but was excluded from the negotiations.

"Saved the Nation."

St. Paul, Aug. 3 (AP).—National Republican Chairman John D. M. Hamilton today contended the refusal of many wheat farmers to participate in the Administration's crop control plan had "saved the Nation from a threatening disastrous shortage of a basic food."

In the address delivered before a luncheon of party workers, he said "the facts are that in the face of over $100,000,000 paid the wheat farmers so far for reducing the acreage of the 1935-1936 wheat crop, farmers nevertheless increased their wheat plantings by eight per cent over the plantings of the preceding year. The sowings of wheat this year were 5,000,000 acres more than the year previous."

Hamilton said "the destruction of 6,200,000 pigs, the slaughter of 200,000 prospective mother sows, and the reduction of corn by 12,600,000 acres" had left farmers without reserve supplies to meet the drought shortage.

Landon's Talk

itol where Landon met visitors a political rally was held in the City Auditorium by Dr. Francis E. Townsend in behalf of Townsend candidates in the State primary tomorrow.

Asked whether he would seek an appointment with Landon, the old age pension leader said:

"The Governor has expressed no desire to see me, so why should I ask for an appointment to see him. My visit in Kansas has convinced me that the vote to be cast in November will be a protest vote against both old parties. I wouldn't be surprised to see the election thrown into the House of Representatives."

Dr. Townsend has said he would favor William Lemke, the Union Party candidate, for the Presidency.

Taber reported to newsmen that with Eugene Eckert, of Mascouta, Ill., and C. C. Cogswell, Topeka, he talked over with Landon "the problems of drought, water and soil conservation and the need of an intelligent approach to the crop insurance problem."

"We found the Governor sympathetic," he said, "and fully informed on the problems and needs of agriculture."

Steiwer, who was keynoter at the Republican convention, told reporters "the swing that set in after Cleveland justifies the prediction that Landon will be elected." The Oregonian is vice chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee which Senator Townsend of Delaware heads.

Lodge predicted both he and the Presidential candidate would carry Massachusetts in November.

Landon departed for Emporia tonight for visit with William Allen White, the editor, before proceeding tomorrow morning to Independence, his home town, where he will cast his primary election vote.

After conferring with the Governor, Steiwer said he was "more than delighted" with Landon's "adequate grasp of the whole problem" of the drought situation.

Steiwer said Landon not only was concerned with emergency phases of drought relief but also was seeking an "ultimate solution" of the soil and water conservation problem.

Senator Townsend told newsmen "I am going back East to carry the message that the nominee from the prairie State will prove to be one of our greatest Presidents."

Railroads Plan Move to Retain All Surcharges

Will Seek I. C. C. Authority to Continue Rates on Freight Shipments.

By the Associated Press.

New maneuvers to have emergency freight surcharges made permanent were indicated by a spokesman for the Nation's major railroads yesterday after an initial failure before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

A. F. Cleveland, vice president of the Association of American Railroads, said a committee of railroad presidents and attorneys would meet soon "to consider what can best be done."

He added the carriers either could ask the commission to reconsider the blanket authority which it denied, or seek permission to effect individual increases in specific rates which now carry surcharges—a course which railroad spokesmen previously had said would involve the republication of numerous rate schedules at "enormous expense."

Without comment, the commission denied the request of class 1 roads that the emergency surcharges, which they said provided $104,000,000 annually of sorely needed additional revenue, be superimposed permanently on the present rate structure.

The surcharges were put into effect last year and were scheduled originally to expire July 1 this year. Shipping interests vigorously opposed any extension, but the carriers succeeded recently in winning a commission order continuing them for six months—until December 31.

In urging the commission to make the surcharges permanent, the large roads contended they were not causing diversion of traffic to other forms of transportation and that they were not interfering with the free movement of interstate commerce.

The higher charges were permanently necessary, they said, to offset sharply increased operation costs.

Headed by coal interests, shippers replied that the charges were impeding rail traffic and resulting in large-scale diversion of business to trucks.

The coal shippers contended the emergency freight charges had accelerated efforts to find substitutes for coal, and thus had brought about a major drop in railroad tonnage.

Truce Is Reported In Chinese Dispute

Shanghai, Aug. 3 (AP).—Kwangsi Province's stand for independence was reported tonight to have collapsed in the face of persistent pressure by Central government troops of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

Earlier in the day Japanese news sources said Chinese troops moved from the adjacent province of Kwangtung into Kwangsi border towns and established military positions.

But at that point the troops simply exchanged a few harmless shots in the vicinity of Wuchow, it was learned from British naval authorities stationed nearby.

The Central government at Nanking, dominated by Gen. Chiang, declared there had been no hostilities.

Strategy, it was said, consisted of blocking the frontier to prevent a spread of antagonism to Central government rule, which recently was established in Kwangsi's sister province of Kwangtung (together forming the old South China government).

The apparent truce came after a long battle yesterday at Mushanghu, near Doshing, when some 3,000 Kwangsi troops were reported defeated by Nanking fighters.

Roosevelt Drive to Open

a few days before beginning another trip of any kind.

Asked about plans for Presidential political speeches, Early replied there was "nothing imminent." He said the drought State tour would be "nonpolitical."

Wallace said both he and Davis sat in on the political deliberations this afternoon, but said his visit had no political significance, and that there had been no discussion of the farm vote.

Asks for Airport.

The President, he said, issued instructions that a complete report be assembled on drought-remedy measures under way in the Administration for his consideration when he reaches the Capital. The secretary added that no new measures were contemplated as an outgrowth of that parley today.

A New York train was held for a few minutes as Farley and Wallace rushed through a press conference and then dashed for the station.

"I reported to the President," the national committee head said, "that headquarters was practically all set up and we were further ahead than we were in 1932 with organization.

"I brought him up-to-date on everything since he left on his vacation."

Starting the first of next week, Farley said, Democratic leaders will be brought to New York from the entire country and national headquarters will "insist that they duplicate the arrangements in State headquarters so far as possible."

Party finances again received attention today, Farley said, and it was decided to try to hold campaign expenditures within $2,000,000.

Just before the political discussions got under way, Charles West, Undersecretary of Interior and liaison man between the White House and Congress, saw Mr. Roosevelt briefly with reference to the political outlook in Ohio.

As he was talking with the President, Wallace said, he was advised by telephone from Washington that reports were circulating that the purpose of his visit was to ask Mr. Roosevelt to reduce the tariff on corn and wheat.

"That was not discussed," he said.

Farley was flanked on arrival by W. Forbes Morgan, treasurer, and Frank Walker, finance chairman, of the national committee, who, like himself, carried crammed brief cases under their arms.

In the party also were Miss Mary Dewsom, director of the women's division; L. W. Robert, jr., secretary, and Charles Michelson, publicity director of the national committee, and Stanley High, head of the Good Neighbors League and a comparative newcomer in the inner political councils.

Charles West, Undersecretary of the Interior, who arrived from Ohio last night on the way to Cape Cod, had preceded them to the President's home.

Says Lehman Will Win.

Before the conference, Farley, who is chairman also of the New York State Democratic committee, told newsmen Herbert H. Lehman again would be chosen Governor of the State in the fall elections.

Dressed in a double-breasted brown suit, set off by a straw hat, the Democratic committee chieftain was greeted by reporters with a request for "comment on reports of the availability of Theodore Roosevelt for the Republican nomination for Governor of New York."

Smiling, Farley hesitated a moment, then remarked:

"It would be a great nomination. The people of New York on another occasion have rendered their opinion of Col. Roosevelt.

"It doesn't make any difference whom the Republicans nominate. Herbert Lehman will be re-elected Governor in November."

Government Buys Cattle

the area, largely on water conservation programs.

The Department of Agriculture drought committee has designated 726 counties in 18 States as a guide to Governmental agencies which are providing relief for drought victims. In addition to the WPA job program and Government cattle purchases, reduced freight rates are being applied, and the Resettlement Administration is providing aid through livestock feed and transportation loans.

Unofficial estimates of July's corn crop damage ranged around 700,000,000 bushels. If heavy rains fall to materialize this week the yield may drop to the lowest point since the 1,195,000,000-bushel yield of 1881, it was said.

Corn markets discounted the damage by sharp advances as the sun claimed its toll. Although about half of the corn belt output was conceded lost, somewhat better prospects prevailed in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, but there were sizeable areas in which very little corn would make grain. In western New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia, central Kentucky, northwestern Arkansas, and the eastern slope of the Rockies from Colorado to Montana, the corn crop was badly injured and all late crops had suffered materially from the drought.

American buying in Argentine markets was a significant development. Shipments from Buenos Aires destined for the United States totaled 421,000 bushels. One cargo of Argentine corn arrived at Seattle last week.

Wheat crops, already forced down to a 638,000,000-bushel estimate as of July 1, promised to show further deterioration in the Department of Agriculture's next crop report as result of unfavorable conditions in the Northern Great Plains States.

The department estimates that world wheat supplies outside of Russia and China now appear likely to be at least 230,000,000 bushels below supplies in 1935-36, and the smallest since 1927. Trade agencies forecast a spring wheat crop in the Canadian prairie provinces at a maximum of 225,000,000 bushels, which would be the smallest harvest since 1919. Canada is the principal source of emergency United States wheat importations. The European crop, including Russia, is expected to be 75,000,000 bushels short of the 1935 harvest.

Yesterday starting of Government cattle purchases were the first authorized under the limited cattle-buying program approved July 6. Department representatives have been watching the situation on the scene since July 20. Authorized purchases covered 4,343 cutter grade cows and heifers and 450 common grade calves in five markets—Fargo, St. Paul, Omaha, Chicago and Sioux City.

A departure from the 1934 cattle-buying program was noted. Under the last drought program, purchases were made directly from the farmers. This year purchases are being made only at terminal markets.

Droves of short fed cattle were being rushed to the market because of rising corn prices and in some cases because of short supplies of water. Officials noted the heaviest offering of cattle at some markets in three years. On seven markets 88,200 cattle were offered, compared with 74,500 a week ago.

"If prices strengthen," said Jesse W. Tapp, chairman of the drought committee, "the committee will discontinue purchases for the time. If prices continue to decline, purchasing will be continued. The volume of purchasing will depend on day-to-day conditions, within the maximum daily allotments for the various markets."

Commission to Install 7th Street Safety Zones

In a move to expedite the movement of traffic, the Public Utilities Commission yesterday decided to install safety zones on Seventh street northwest from Constitution avenue to Mount Vernon place.

The commission discussed the Monroe street bus case and the one-man street car petition of the Capital Transit Co., but took no action.

LET KIDNEYS FLUSH OUT 3 LBS. A DAY
Clean Out 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes
Nature put over 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters in your kidneys to strain the waste matter out of the blood. Kidneys should pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter.
When the passing of water is scanty, with smarting and burning, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.
If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your body may take up some of these poisons causing serious trouble. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, which have been used successfully by millions of people for over 40 years. They give happy relief and help the kidneys to flush out 3 pounds a day. Insist on Doan's Pills. (Advt.)

A Costly Policy.

A short time ago countervailing duties were imposed upon a large proportion of our imports from Germany to offset subsidies paid to Germany's exporters. Following the usual method of procedure under such provocation, Germany has now retaliated by announcing that certain blocked mark accounts may no longer be employed to pay for goods shipped to the United States, and private barter transactions will also be outlawed.

As a large part of the commerce between the two countries has been carried on by resort to now forbidden practices, the result of Berlin's latest decrees will be further declines in an already sadly shrunken volume of German-American trade.

Our experience in dealing with Germany serves as a warning against the policy of trying to expand exports by subsidization. It also emphasizes the evils of trade policies that invite retaliation and counter-retaliation, involving the nations concerned in a defensive contest that injures all the principals. At present, of course, Germany is not a free agent in dealing with foreign nations. She is enmeshed in special clearing agreements and under tremendous pressure to acquire funds for financing needed imports. Consequently, she is and must indefinitely remain outside the circle of countries with which the United States would find it feasible to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements.

While circumstances thus explain and doubtless justify invocation of the anti-dumping provisions of our tariff laws against Germany, it is evident that the chain of subsidies, countervailing duties and retaliatory measures will accelerate the drastic decline in our export shipments to a country that even in 1930 bought over $300,000,000 of American goods.

Bank Holiday.

Civil war may be raging in Spain, the heavy clouds of impending strife may be hovering over Europe and Asia, many nations may be faced by extremely grave internal and external problems, but these situations had only a remote interest to the British people during the past week-end. With rare exceptions, they had but a single thought in mind—to pack their belongings and be off for their August bank holiday.

This year's exodus reached staggering proportions. The railroads alone, it is estimated, accommodated no fewer than 12,000,000 pleasure-bound Britons, while countless others went by buses, motorcycles, automobiles and airplanes to holiday resorts in Great Britain and on the continent. Despite the threat of war old habits have proved stronger than new fears.

It is an encouraging fact, too, that the flounderings of British statesmen in matters of international and domestic policy find no reflection in the habits of the average Englishman. Though the heavens fall he must have his tea, his week-end and his bank holiday. At a time of universal and revolutionary change these manifestations of fundamental stability prove that all is still well on the right little, tight little isle.

Shifting To Private Jobs.

Since the peak of relief work was reached last February, the number of employes on WPA projects has fallen from 3,034,000 to less than 2,300,000. The low point of the decline, however, was reached at the end of June when 2,225,000 were on the pay rolls. Since that time the drought has added 40,000 farmers to the list, more than offsetting any current dismissals and transfers.

It is encouraging to note that there has been a shrinkage of approximately 25 per cent in the WPA lists since midwinter, but the total is still appallingly large. Moreover, it has to be remembered that workers on a special list of PWA projects are to be drawn exclusively from relief rolls. In view of widespread improvement in business conditions marked by a contra-seasonal rise in employment in a large number of industries, opportunities for hastening transfers to private employment are exceptionally good. There should be no disposition to rest content with the progress already made in view of the high cost of the work-relief program.

The mere fact that the relief rolls are beginning to lengthen again in face of a decided pick-up in private employment shows how great is the temptation to regard the WPA as a permanent establishment instead of an emergency agency to be demobilized as rapidly as possible. It is imperative that the size of Federal relief outlays should be reduced to manageable proportions and responsibility for the care of the unemployed be returned to the several States. Such essential reforms will be much easier to effect if the Government relief agencies diligently prosecute the search for new openings in private employment.

No Parallel With 1914.

Twenty-two years ago today Great Britain cast her lot with the Allies and in so doing transformed the European conflict that had already broken out into a world struggle.

Is Europe back to where it was in 1914? Are the dogs of war again about to be unleashed on that continent? More and more the answers that are being given to these questions are in the affirmative. But the trend of events during the last two decades must be carefully analyzed before we assume that the history of 1914-18 is about to be repeated.

There can be no denying that the spirit of war is again on the march in Europe. the intensity with which great powers and small are participating in the race in armaments; the feverish search for allies; the struggle to achieve autarchy; the increasing regimentation of peoples to make them willing fodder for cannon—all this activity, if persisted in, can have but one outcome—war. But the greatest disservice to the cause of peace is to view the situation fatalistically. War was not inevitable even in July, 1914; it is not inevitable now. Nor does it add anything to a true understanding of the existing facts to emphasize a parallel between 1936 and 1914 which does not really exist.

To be sure, it is being pointed out that Russia and France are again allies with an uncertain and hesitant Britain tied to the chariot of the latter power; and that recent diplomatic developments, by bringing Germany, Italy, Austria and Hungary together, have resulted in a reconstitution of the old Triple Alliance.

But Europe is not actually divided into two camps as it was in 1914. France and Russia today have abandoned the dynamic policies they followed then. France is not interested in regaining any lost territories, but only in keeping what it has. Russia has scrapped the Czarist policy regarding Constantinople and the Straits. It, too, wants only peace. On the other hand, it is a mistake to assume that the diplomatic maneuvers of Germany and Italy will lead to actual restoration of the old Triple Alliance. For even more than in 1914, Italy can at best be regarded as only an uncertain partner of the Reich, while Austria and Hungary, no longer linked by dynastic ties, have become mere shadows of their former selves.

At the same time there are in Europe a number of new states that did not exist in 1914. These powers—Poland, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, a Rumania double its prewar size, a Turkey freed from the incubus of Sultan and Caliph—play an essential role of their own in European affairs. They are not, as were the Balkan states before the war, the catspaws of the great powers. Nor can the League of Nations be ignored as a factor which makes the present situation far different from what it was in the past. Despite its lamentable failure in the Ethiopian situation, it continues to exist and as long as it does it can be used as a rallying ground for all those nations anxious to preserve the peace.

But the greatest difference between the present situation and that of 1914 lies in the fact that nations and statesmen today recognize that war would inevitably hasten the process of internal disintegration which on the surface or beneath the surface is in evidence throughout the continent. The violent class war which has broken out in Spain, can nowhere be ignored, least of all in those dictatorial countries which are most likely to seek the arbitrament of war for the achievement of grandiose national aims. Superficially these nations enjoy singular unity. But underneath the surface the opposition continues. Should war come the dictatorships would have to arm the people. Can any dictator be certain that these arms will be employed purely against foreign foes?

Weak governments beset by intricate domestic problems have replaced the powerful regimes that ruled Europe in 1914. Class struggle as well as national rivalry has become a potent factor. From the broad viewpoint of a world slipping toward chaos the situation today is even more dangerous than that in the prewar era. Fortunately, however, the very gravity of the internal problems with which European powers are struggling tends to discourage rash flirtation with war.

Farm Gains and Losses.

On July 15 the Bureau of Agricultural Economics index of farm prices advanced to 115 per cent of the prewar level, as compared with an index of 102 per cent a year earlier. During the preceding month the price rise is said to have been the sharpest recorded for any 30-day period since August, 1934, and subsequent advances have raised the level still higher. Government estimates place farm income for the first six months of the year $335,000,000 above the figure for the same period in 1935, and it is predicted that the 1936 total will be the largest in six years.

A rise in the prices of farm products from the abnormally low levels of former years was urgently needed to restore farm buying. Such increases when based upon improved market demands and a better balanced agriculture benefit not only farmers but also industrial producers who find increased market outlets for their own products. There is a great difference, however, between an orderly restoration of farm buying power in which the farm populace generally shares and a temporary upturn in crop prices obtained at the expense of farmers in drought areas who have little or nothing to sell.

Many of these distressed farmers, moreover, are now dependent upon Federal relief funds. Emergency outlays on their account, debited to taxpayers, should be deducted from the gains of the favored farm groups. Wage earners and salaried workers will also feel the pinch of the current advance in food prices following upon the sharp increases of the past three years. This rise in living costs in turn will have a depressing effect upon the market for other consumable goods.

The Administration's agricultural planners cannot afford, therefore, to take credit for an unexpected rise in farm income due chiefly to a devastating drought. If they attempt to do so, they need not be surprised if they are forced to accept responsibility for the even greater losses, direct and indirect, that have to be charged up against gains they did not foresee and had not planned.

Up To The People.

Senator King, of the Senate Finance Committee, believes there is "absolutely no chance to balance our budget for an indefinite period, a very indefinite one, under our present policy—despite all hopes and statements to the contrary." He charges that the people themselves are at fault because expenditures are so great and says they "can't pass the buck to Congress."

Although the senior Senator from Utah may be inclined to underrate the extent to which Congress is responsible for legislative extravagance, he is no doubt right in thinking that the major responsibility rests with the people. Ideally, of course, our legislators ought to have the moral stamina to resist pressure to vote bounties, subsidies and other gratuities that unbalance the budget and burden the taxpayer. Actually, such resistance may mean defeat at the polls and substitution of a representative more responsive to popular demands. Unless the people are willing to support Congress, therefore, in carrying through a retrenchment program, budgetary balance is certain to be long delayed.

Senator King's disillusioned attitude offers a much better point of departure for an approach to fiscal soundness than vague promises of retrenchment which ignore the serious political obstacles in the way of fulfillment. It is easy to clamor for economy and denounce Federal deficits, but the test of the critic's sincerity comes when the pinch of economy begins to be felt. Then Congress needs protection against the full impact of popular demands.

By impressing upon the people the seriousness of the fiscal situation and the need to restrict the scope of Federal activities to matters that properly belong to the National Government, a foundation can be laid for a really effective economy program. The fact that a Democratic Senator has had the courage to admit the weakness of Congress and decry the greed of various organized groups is a hopeful indication that some of our legislators are thinking about budgetary problems in a realistic way.

The Modern Diana.

An amateur experimenter in California has been hauled to jail on the charge of securing money fraudulently through a mail order canvass for a wife. This accusation remains to be proven, yet there is no denying that his matrimonial search contributed suggestive data, not only to sociologists interested in modern marriage problems but also to the writers of novels.

The young Californian—well, he is only 42!—is said to have received 13,000 acceptances to his printed proposal. School mistresses were predominant among these would-be brides. Nurses were next in number, and "unemployed spinsters" third.

Here is room for wide sociological speculation and hard romantic research, for, as might be expected, the feminine reactions to this neophyte's offer are sorely in need of scientific analysis and codification. It is not necessary, however, to wait for the cogitation of specialists to draw one obvious conclusion.

This Californian's experience puts the stamp of reality upon a contention advanced as mere theory when "Man and Superman" was first produced. Therein, the legend of the male as a natural and thorough-going pursuer of the female was derided as a mere myth created, for his deception and subjugation, by the female. Throughout the drama it was boldly suggested that the man need never give the woman more than half a Barkis intimation.

Ever since then the gentler novelists have fought that drama tooth and nail, and even our emancipated womanhood has stood, on this issue, solidly beside the gentler novelists. Now, whatever may be the fate of the new California pioneer, he will at least have the consolation of knowing that he has substantiated a theory originally advanced by the great George Bernard Shaw.

Many predict that in the near future a large percentage of Americans will be living in auto trailers. A country overrun with motorcycle tax collectors is something dreadful to contemplate.

Letters to the Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

'Put Aside Prejudices.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In these days of national and international distress but few persons, even The Post's habitual complainers, offer anything by way of constructive solution except the bleating of a lamb that has been shorn or the hungry cry of a wolf that craves more, more.

What difference does it make that an election is on? What genuine hope can the Nation reasonably anticipate either from the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt or the election of Gov. Landon? Citizens and voters of ordinary intelligence can answer that question as they have answered similar questions in the past; what difference?

My purpose is not to advocate a run-away from either of our two major parties; and most certainly it is not to try to persuade anybody to expose the avowed principles of Townsend, Coughlin or any of the rest of the smaller satellites. I have only one principal objective in view, and I think it is morally, legally, politically and sociologically sound.

It is no cure-all for the economic and social ills that beset us, and it is not meant to be. But it may help us all to get a better and keener perspective of the mess in which we find ourselves. Let us all fight our troubles and strive to the utmost to overcome them by ourselves and within ourselves; and let us put aside in a needy hour our likes and dislikes, our prejudices and favors—all in behalf of our common country. K. L. NALSEY.
Washington, July 29.

The Use Of 'Milkshed'.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We do not speak of a "District garden-truck shed" because market gardeners within a certain radius may find it more convenient to dispose of their products in the District than elsewhere. And who would think of referring to a "District population shed" because those residing with in a reasonable distance from the center of this city normally trade or work here? Why then a "District milkshed?" The movement of garden truck and of population in such cases is obviously governed by forces similar to those controlling the movement of milk, and in no way similar to those determining the flow of water.

Mixed metaphors have long been a favorable subject for ridicule. But what shall we say of the numerous metaphorical expressions finding their way into our current pseudoscientific terminology? While not mixed, many of these are based on no true analogy. And false analogies lead inevitably to false conclusions.

CHARLES H. PROBERT.

Economy And Thrift.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Miss Whiffler claims that most people do not practice "economy and thrift." She should remember that several million people who did this, lost their life savings a few years ago when capitalism confiscated their investments in stocks and bonds and savings accounts, in its periodical raid on the middle class, at the expense of these thrifty for benefit of the shifty!

As to millions of others who toil their life long for from $8 to $18 a week, with families to support, will she kindly advise as to how they could be anything else but economical and thrifty, and having done so, could they do possibly more than to keep from starving to death, if that? R. L. SCOTT.
Washington, July 30.

Toscanini No Exile.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial of July 26, you state that Arturo Toscanini is "an Italian exiled by Italian Fascists."

Allow me to point out to you that the Maestro isn't by any means an exiled Italian.

He lives in Italy in a villa on the Lake Maggiore and he is free to leave Italy at his will; were it not so he wouldn't have been able to come to New York last winter, and couldn't be now in Salzburg.

ANTONIO ALBERTI POIA.

Farm Resettlement.

To the Editor of The Post — Sir: Mr. Nash has so thoroughly misunderstood the opening sentence in Dr. Tugwell's current history article. "Down to Earth," that one is obliged to assume that the meaning of the entire article has escaped him. The word "retirement" applies to the land—not to the farmer.

And here's my reaction to Mr. Kelly Nash's "Reaction to Mr. Tugwell's Views." "* * * whether this altogether foreign program shall be engrafted upon and supplant the orderly normal processes of American life * * *" is something that bothers him. Orderly processes of American life, indeed! Where have you been these last 20 years or so, since the Great War? With your head stuck in the mud? Otherwise you might have seen or heard something of what is going on around you, and all the "orderliness" of the social upheavals caused by that cataclysm and its consequences.

Just look where the "orderly normal processes, etc.," have led the millions of farmers on bad land, not to mention the quite un-American misery and suffering of other millions who are not farmers! Have the Republicans done anything much to help? Now have they? Why then sneer at Tugwell, a very able administrator with far-seeing, progressive ideas, who, in the exceedingly short time—as historical reckoning goes—that he has been functioning at the head of the Resettlement Administration, has assisted more than 650,000 destitute farm families, more than 3,000,000 people, putting them on their feet again.

Nobody is "resettled" who does not want to be. And what to me seems un-American is to level criticism and dangerous insinuations against those who are body and soul in the fight to help the poor and give them back their self-respect in a thoroughly dignified and "American" way.

ADELE NEVILLE.
Washington, July 27.

Pro and Con.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Didn't the President himself set the example of calling others who disagree "liars?" In an address to a bunch of farmers from the White House balcony, he called not only a former President but a lot of other public men liars. President Roosevelt said "A great many of the high and mighty have been deliberately lying about the kind of farm program this country is operating."

Calling "liars" has a precedent in Roosevelt's utterances. His chickens came home to roost.

H. JAMES.
Washington, July 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We know that Mr. Roosevelt has made mistakes. But perhaps his greatest mistake was made when he invited Coughlin to the White House. And we know, too, that Mr. Roosevelt has tried to satisfy all elements in this fair land. If we differ with him we have a right to register that difference at the polls in November.

I don't think that anyone had the right to insult and vilify our President as Coughlin has done.

MRS. M. E. HOLLEY.
Washington, July 24.

Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My blood boils when I think of the feeble law enforcement of our city. Some of the courts appear to protect the criminal rather than the public.

I am grateful for your alertness. Thank you for editorial of July 29, "Case for a Crime Commission," and for the one of this morning, "Inconsistent Law Enforcement." Keep up the good work.

Women's Place.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will you permit me to call the attention of Mr. Waltman and his supporters to the fact that in demanding that women keep out of public affairs they are denying and jeopardizing democracy? Approximately half the population of the United States is female and the United States Government recognizes no difference in citizenship on the basis of sex when it comes to collecting taxes.

Are Mr. Waltman and his supporters willing to demand that women shall be tax free if they keep out of public affairs?

The attitude of Mr. Waltman and his supporters for the contention that women should devote their whole attention to the home and the products of the dry-goods counter arouses some interesting speculations on the social life of these gentlemen. Is their interest in public affairs and the world around them so superficial and laborious that the second the day's work is over they refuse to think of anything and talk of anything but the cut of their next suits and what kind of curtains should be hung in the north bedroom?

C. A. ODEM.
Lanham, Md., July 30.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: I note that Mrs. Landon seems to believe that a woman's place is in her home and that your Franklyn Waltman apparently believes it is in the drawing room. Quite possibly Mrs. Roosevelt would agree with them—if there were enough drawing rooms to go around. But there are not even enough homes.

And with a million sister women exploited in sweatshops and working long hours for little pay, the marvelous energy and spirit for service of Mrs. Roosevelt will not permit her to remain comfortably at home, placidly pouring pale tea for puttering diplomats.

Mr. Garner's Silence.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is one thing which puzzles me. Every paper has a great deal to say about the coming campaign. Farley predictions and Roosevelt fishing. But among the galaxy of names, one is strangely missing. I speak of the nominee of the Democratic Party for Vice President, John N. Garner.

His State is having a celebration and Mr. Garner should be the chief—in his own State—but even among the news of that event I do not recall his having made a speech. Why this silence?

I wish Mr. Garner would make several speeches during the campaign. His honest opinion of Government affair should be worth a great deal. His experience through the many years which he has served should enable him to paint a picture that would give the voters an insight of the New Deal that cannot be secured from any other source. Heroes Of Science.

We read with interest of the fight now being waged in Montana by a group of scientists who are slowly winning a long battle against Rocky Mountain spotted fever. The brief report points out that 11 of those men already have given their lives to the cause. More of them, probably, will die before the fight is won.

The fever is contracted from the bite of a small tick. It has been a mysterious malady, deadly as typhus. Those who experiment with it invite death. But the fight goes on, even in the face of its deadly effects, and from the experiments and investigation will come a cure. One more curse will be lifted from humankind. Those who are immunized and spared may not even know the names of their benefactors, whose bravery will never get its just dues. But they are numbered among the outstanding heroes of the race.

The Post Impressionist

The Mask Is Off.

Post Office, Tuesday

AT the foot of this Column, yesterday, huddled a certain signature. It's still there.

You may have noticed it.

Or you may not.

We ourselves, for an appreciable and happy moment, failed to detect its Uriah Heep No. 19 italics. Nor should we finally mention them save for an order received, from Higher Up, to the effect that, although this was their first appearance down below, it would not be their last.

* * *

Such news, we feelingly admit, may possess some interest for some readers of Our Column—and Yours. Since his masked appearance here, with the original Ms. in his pocket (when the Column was started) some two-and-a-half years ago, its author's identity has been scrupulously guarded—a State Secret. And, notoriously, most secrets breed curiosity in inverse ratio to their importance. Then, on Monday (for reasons of polity which we do not pretend to fathom) the powers decided to satisfy such curiosity as continued extant in the present instance: The identity of The Post-Impressionist must be revealed.

And the stern duty of revelation was assigned to The Post-Impressionist.

So let's get through with it:

The Post-Impressionist is and (except on a half-dozen occasions when his absence from Washington prevented it) always has been that individual whose name is now being signed to The Post-Impressionist Column.

* * *

The curious crowd having thus got what it asked for, we hope it will survive the joyous shock . . .

If, however, The Post-Impressionist thinks he has sprung a clever surprise on us, we hasten to assure him that he is mistaken. Indeed, we have all along suspected that we were he.

Of course, he denied it to our face. But mock modesty is one of his characteristics. There were recurrent letters to the paper suggesting that he was we; and there were many stylistic peculiarities about his work which deepened our hunch: especially an annoying inversion of phrases, the betrayal of a Gargantuan lust for food and the sedulous practice of an obviously fraudulent good-nature.

Suspicion became conviction when, last week, he wrote those verses on the Olympic games. There was then a covert arrogance in his manner which made us willing to offer heavy odds that, if he weren't we, he was on the way to get our job.

One word more, and we shall have done with our personal opinions:

Our candidate for The Post-Impressionist's post was somebody else. It was Richard Jarvis.

We feel the present incumbent is, despite his physical girth, too narrow. His favorite authors seem to be Reginald Wright Kauffman, Sergius Bulgakov, Charles Dickens, Dostoievsky, Wilkie Collins, Henry James, H. H. Millman as an annotator of Gibbon, Shirley Povich and Reginald Wright Kauffman. So far as we can make out, his favorite humorist is Erskine Caldwell.

If you asked The Post-Impressionist what he thinks of Heywood Broun, the reply would probably be that the Post-Impressionist doesn't—that as for F. P. A., The Post-Impressionist likes Odd McIntyre, Lank Leonard? "I never read sociology" Walter Winchell? Who's he?

From his earliest childhood, The Post-Impressionist's ambition was, admittedly, to be a columnist. But, ever since he has been one, his ambition appears to have been to be anything else—except unemployed.

Feeling thus about him, we avoided what might prove controversial subjects, when—under orders—we interviewed him.

We evinced an interest in his other bad habits. He said:

"I neither drink nor smoke."

"But then," we demanded, "what do you do to keep yourself so splendidly fit?"

He replied: "Under Heaven, I attribute my excellent health to taking no exercise whatsoever—and to the allied fact that most of my friends own motor-cars."

"What do you think of your Column?"

"I have consistently pursued no policy—and have occasionally captured what I pursued."

"How do you feel—having your name revealed after this period of anonymity?"

"Naked—but unashamed."

From that interview, we came away with some apprehensions as to his reference concerning his columnar policies. We scent a battle, even if from afar. And we are resolved on our course therein.

We won't let him presume upon the fact that we are he. So far as is humanly possible, we won't let him modify, in the smallest particular, those principles which, as The Post-Impressionist, he and we set up 29 months ago, and to which, ever since, we and he have rigorously and conscientiously, against untold temptations, adhered.

If he goes too far, we'll resign.

Fair Enough

Foundations And Such.

I always have had a great respect for American institutions, including the reformatories and lunatic asylums, and have been inclined to accept institutes as venerable landmarks of our civilization, too. Of late, however, thanks to association with persons engaged in the trade of seducing public opinion, I have learned that the well-nigh sacred name of institute is sometimes used for ulterior purposes and that an institute may be nothing more than a press agent doing a job for a client. This is a disturbing suspicion, and I hope I am mistaken, although I am afraid I am right, as usual. I would rather be wrong than President in this case.

The foundation also comes into doubt at this point. Foundation has a solid sound. Orators declaim about the foundations of our liberties and our Government and of our noble American institutions. Mr. Harding was fond of mentioning the founding fathers, and Mr. Harding was a sound man—a typical American, it must be admitted—and the flower of his party, although I find no proud reminders of his Presidency in the recent orations of his political heirs. His reign was prosperous and his party regularity impeccable, and I should think that some time in the current campaign the defenders of the Republican tradition would come a little closer to the present than Hamilton and Lincoln and tell us what Warren Harding did for the U. S. A.

But referring to the institute, an American institution which has captured the American imagination in the last 15 or 20 years, I am sorry to have discovered that almost anyone can organize an institute. After all, what does it take to create an institute of piscatorial reseach, for example, or an American motor transportation institute? Or a citrus foundation? There, my friends, to employ a familiar form of address, is where doubt sets in and skepticism bares its mossy fangs.

For an institute of piscatorial research may be nothing more than an office in a tall building, a hundred dollars' worth of letter-heads and envelopes, a mimeograph machine, a stenographer and a publicity man representing a fish trust. True, the letter-head will bear, down the lefthand margin, a list of familiar or vaguely reminiscent names, mostly of professors, explorers and after-dinner speakers, but that will be only scenery. It might surprise you to discover how many familiar or vaguely reminiscent names there are in this world which are proud to be listed down the lefthand margin of the letter-head of an institute.

And a foundation or union or even a league or congress for the propagation or suppression of this or that may be nothing more than an institute.

* * * *

Often in my mail I receive announcements from institutions, foundations, unions, leagues and congresses, and always the prestige of these titles does something to check the hand which would toss into the basket a handout from an ordinary press agent. After all, an institution might be something, or a foundation or a congress. And when their letters come with a 3-cent stamp and the inclosure is signed by hand, in ink, asking me to become a member of the honorary committee, eligible for mention on the lefthand margin of the stationery, my emotions are too delicate for explanation here. It suggests that I am a citizen of consequence, I think—the equal of a socially prominent auctioneer or a famed world traveler, author and lecturer with whiskers and a man who has made his mark or, anyway, a scar on the life of the community.

But every time this has happened to me I have discovered that the institute, foundation, league or union is in reality just an office up on the high floors of a tall building, with some little girl in charge for $20 a week and one phone and a water cooler and that the head man is one of those high-power deceivers of the publicity business who calls in only once a week to look over the mail. The professors, the socially prominent auctioneers and famed world travelers, authors and lecturers are nowhere to be seen, and when I read the roster from the lefthand margin of the page to the little girl in charge and ask if I may speak to them she says—"Who? They don't work here. If it is a bill just leave it, though, and I will send it on."

* * * *

Lately I have grown very aloof toward announcements from institutes, foundations and the like. But if someone sends me some copy frankly marked "Publicity from a press agent" I will smell it up with lavender and put it under my pillow to dream on and possibly sneak a few cents' worth into the paper. An institute, and so forth, is a press agent with spats on.

Goodyear X Wins Grudge Air Race

Cleveland, Aug. 3 (U.P.).—The balloon Goodyear X tonight was declared winner in its grudge race with the balloon Great Lakes Exposition for the right to represent the United States in the international balloon race. The Goodyear X traveled 297 miles from the Great Lakes Exposition here and landed near Le Rayville, Pa. The Exposition bag came down near Wellsboro, Pa., 225 miles distant.

Milford Vsnik, of Cleveland, and Anthony Fairbanks, of Philadelphia, were injured slightly when their losing balloon hit a wall in lading.

Frank Trotter and John Rieker, of Akron, pilots of the winning entry, landed safely.

The two bags left the exposition grounds 22 minutes apart early today.

The contest was to decide national balloon supremacy left undetermined recently at Denver when a dispute developed after the Goodyear was declared winner.

The Perfect Gas Mask

London Correspondent, Viewing Britain's New Armaments, Debates Whether Perfect War Or Perfect Peace Will Result.

By David Wills.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

London,

EIGHTEEN MONTHS ago the domestic crisis brewing in England over unemployment relief was pushed on one side by the foreign crisis, for which the curtain-raiser was Hitler's reintroduction of conscription. During 1935 domestic controversy was suspended while the government tried out the popularity acceptable policy of supporting the League. The apostasy of the government and the defeat of the League have reversed the situation. And it may now prove that our foreign policy will be decided by a domestic struggle.

It is perhaps more than a coincidence that the present moment has been taken to reintroduce to Parliament the amended unemployment assistance regulations which last year in their original form caused such an uproar. The opposition then charged the government with economizing at the expense of the poorest sections of the community, and the government was forced to yield.

The new regulations are slightly more generous than the old, but the same in principle, and once again the attack is being worked up. But the opposition has a more difficult task this time, just because the government has reversed its foreign policy. The official atmosphere in which we now are invited to live is one of fear and panic, in which we can rearm without limit, can demand sacrifices from all sections of the people, including the unemployed, in the sacred name of national defense.

British Popular Front Possibilities Seen Remote.

THE POSSIBILITY of forming a Popular Front to defeat the government on domestic and on foreign policy is still remote. The trouble is that of the three parties to the front, only one is willing to compromise its theoretical program for the sake of an alliance. The Liberals invite the Laborites to drop talk of socialism for a while and concentrate on a good liberal policy; the Laborites say, we are the Popular Front, let others join us. Only the dimuitive Communist Party is willing to forget revolution for the sake of defeating a conservatism which is leading to fascism; and any move by the Communists is immediately suspect, most of all by Labor, as another Bolshevik machination.

A majority of Liberal and Labor voters, and a great number of Communists and even of progressive Conservatives would have no difficulty in agreeing upon a specific program in domestic and foreign affairs for a period of, say, five years. Members of the Labor Party are much more willing to join a common front than their leaders. The engineers' and the miners' unions have recently voted to allow the Communists to affiliate with the Labor Party, but the executive is adamant.

Instead of making the most of the program which lies ready-made by their voters, Labor leaders content themselves with crabbing the government on every possible occasion, wasting themselves in futile and frequently unreasonable attack on every single government proposal. This does the Labor Party's reputation more harm than it does the government's. A much more longsighted sense of strategy is being shown by the Communists.

The Labor Party is just praying that the government will try to introduce conscription before the psychological atmosphere has been sufficiently prepared. They fear that if the government chooses its time correctly, conscription may be successfully sold to the public, yet their strategy of opposition is merely to hope the government will make an error of timing.

On the other hand it is reported that the Communists are suggesting that workingmen should urge conscription of their own accord. This would be consistent with the desire of Russia to reverse the revolutionary Comintern policy of the past, to get Communists in Britain as in France allied with the other left wing parties, in preparation for the war against fascism. It is urged that the inevitable conscription should be seized by the working class as their weapon instead of allowing it to become that of reaction. The longer the government can continue its present tactics the more difficult will it become to form an effective co-operative opposition.

Nation Being Panicked Into Vast Re-armament.

FOR WE ARE now being openly panicked into rearmament, and everything is being done to create an atmosphere of fright and fear in which re-armament can become more ambitious and uncontrolled. Gas mask propaganda is being pumped into all the papers. Fifty million perfect gas masks are being produced; every one must have one; a model has been designed to fit over baby's perambulator; the newspapers have even toyed with the idea of giving away gas masks to new subscribers.

The Minister for Co-ordination of Defense Forces is justifying his work to the House not by showing what he has co-ordinated, but by providing that expenditure on each of the fighting services is reaching record highs. As evidence of his skill he assures us that the next war will be fought in the air at speeds of around 400 miles per hour. There's progress for you! Boastfully he points to the £200,000,000 we are spending this year on re-armament. A mere £200,000,000, sneers Rothmere; why Germany is spending £800,000,000! We must spend more than Germany!

Steady propaganda urges increased recruiting for the territorial army, for the national defense force. Not a news film is shown without some troops passing in review, some new airplane dropping bombs, some new gas masks being demonstrated by the prettiest girls all coy with giggles.

England must build up her defenses, must build up her defenses, must build up her defenses . . . more and more insistently the word is drummed in.

Economists Concerned Over Results Of Spending.

ECONOMISTS are already showing signs of concern over the economic consequences of our re-armament. There are various signs, slight but real, which suggest that British recovery is nearing the top of the rise. Costs of production are rising slightly; wages and prices are rising; it is suggested that unemployment can be reduced no further by monetary means, that we are approaching the inflationary stage of the trade cycle.

There has always been strenuous controversy between economists on the merits of a public works policy to relieve unemployment, but not even the most ardent enthusiast for such a program has advocated that it should be introduced at the top of the trade cycle. Yet that is exactly what we are now doing with our arms program, which is to be financed largely by borrowing.

Economists are beginning to fear that we shall produce an artificial stimulation of business which, as in Germany, will be accomplished by a falling standard of living, and will be followed once re-armament is stopped by a precipitous collapse.

It is suggested that no government will dare to stop re-armament in such circumstances, that we are entering a one-way road which leads only to war, if only for the reason that armaments must be consumed. One of the bitter ironies of this position is that buried somewhere under our piling arms lies a royal commission appointed to investigate the private manufacture and trade in arms. The future Hardy, who comes to write a "Dynasts" of the twentieth century, will be sorely tempted to describe the present situation as the private manufacturers' retaliation on the commission!

There are millions of Europeans who are now convinced that the solution of Europe's problems can come after the extremes of fascism and communism have fought each other to a definite conclusion. We in Britain have always believed that the democratic process can deal with all emergencies. If we cannot prove it now, then we defeat democracy throughout the world. And democracy cannot express itself through present British policies.

They lead through fear and rearmament to fascism—a very British variety of fascism, certainly. Such, for example, as is already in mild action in Northern Ireland, where trial by jury as of right no longer exists, where a man can be seized, imprisoned, brought to trial or not, tried by judge or by court-martial just as the authorities wish.

Many observers believe that liberal democracy has repudiated its responsibilities, that in a future struggle between Germany and Russia will be decided whether fascism or communism will rule in Europe. Whether that observation is correct, whether the issue will be allowed to reach that ultimate choice, whether democracy has had its day, is being decided today in large measure in England.

Straw Poll Used To Guide Votes, Says Wallace

Secretary Cites Figures of Farm Journal Giving Edge to Landon.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 3.—Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace today said "we seem to have reached a time when political polls are being used not only to reflect public opinion, but in an attempt to mold public opinion."

The Secretary, stopping off at Democratic headquarters en route from Washington to Hyde Park for a conference with President Roosevelt, said directly that he referred to the recent poll of the Farm Journal, a Philadelphia publication, which gave Gov. Landon 25,000 votes and President Roosevelt 20,000.

Wallace said he had received a letter from a pro-Roosevelt farmer of Cologne, N. J., Walter A. Hoenes, who sought to vote in the Farm Journal but received no ballot.

Hoenes forwarded to the Secretary a letter he received from "Arthur H. Jenkins, editor, the Farm Journal," which said, in part:

"You seem to believe thoroughly in Mr. Roosevelt, and his methods and if so I am sure you are going to very unhappy if you continue to read the Farm Journal. We expect to do our best to stop Mr. Roosevelt's borrowing, spending, deficits and increasing taxes. * * *"

In Hoenes' letter to the Secretary, the Jersey farmer said:

"The paper is owned now by Joseph Pew, jr., Republican financier."

After producing these letters, with the reference to Pew, Secretary Wallace said:

"Mr. Pew is very much opposed to the Administration. He has been active in the Liberty League and has contributed to the agricultural adjunct of the league, the Farmers' Independence Council."

Cites 1932 Straw Vote.

Philadelphia, Aug. 3 (A.P.).—Arthur K. Jenkins, editor of the Farm Journal, replying to remarks made by Henry A. Wallace Secretary of Agriculture, today siad "our 1932 straw vote, which forecast Mr. Roosevelt's election very clearly, did not impress Mr. Wallace as an improper molding of public opinion, or, if it did, he kept very quiet about it."

Jenkins said "The Farm Journal's straw vote is being taken this year in precisely the same way as in the elections of 1924, 1928, and 1932."

"Before Mr. Wallace criticizes such a ballot," Jenkins added, "he should first inform himself about the manner in which the ballot was taken. Of course, no straw vote ballot was sent to our New Jersey subscriber, Mr. Walter A. Hoenes. No ballots have been mailed to anyone. All ballots have been secured by our personal representatives, calling on farmers in their homes, straight down the R. F. D. routes, thus making it very difficult for any political bias to enter into the results."

Troops Called Out After Strike Clash

Orofini, Idaho, Aug. 3 (A.P.).—National Guardsmen moved into turbulent Clearwater County to establish martial law today after a bloody clash between striking logging pickets and a truckload of workers who were returning to jobs in defiance of the strike.

Gov. C. Ben Ross ordered military rule after five strikers were brought to the hospital here with bullet wounds and one of seven beaten woodsmen was hospitalized. The Governor said he took the action at the request of Sheriff Joel Wilson and Assistant Prosecutor Samuel F. Swayne, of Clearwater County.

Ninety guardsmen under command of Col. F. C. Hummel, of Boise, were ordered into the area.

"Further bloodshed must be prevented," declared the Governor. "I believe the men sent there will be able to restore order. If necessary, I will detail additional troops."

Gov. Ross said Sheriff Wilson wired him "large bodies of men have banded themselves together, and are flaunting the authority of the law," adding he "expects further violence from ambush, by reason of the high feeling existing in said strike areas."

Tugwelltown

Uncle Sam—Landlord Super De Luxe

By Felix Bruner.

mediately some of the people of the community have wanted to know whether these schools were going to be run by Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell and, if so, what they could expect the children to be taught. No, came the reply from the Resettlement Administration. Although the town will be owned by a corporation, the schools will be operated just as all other Maryland schools are operated, under supervision of Maryland authorities. The high school will be open to students of the surrounding country, as well as of Greenbelt.

But with the exception of the schools, the form of government will be paternalistic or proprietary, at least at first. Maryland hasn't seen that kind of government since the days of Lord Baltimore. But, the Resettlement Administration assures us, the people eventually will have something to say about their town. The hope is expressed that within three or four years the town will have its own charter and elect its own town council. It is expected that there will be a city manager form of government. In fact, it is going to have a city manager right away. He will be Roy Braden, former county manager of Arlington County.

There is some apprehension, however, that there may be difficulties ahead. The town still will be owned by the corporation, which in turn will be obligated, through its mortgage, to the Resettlement Administration. Will the corporation and the town council agree? The fire engine will be owned by the corporation, but the town council presumably will have control of it. The same will be true of the streets and the parks and the lake and the water tower. Will the board of directors of the corporation or the town council decide when one of the corporation-owned sidewalks is to be repaired? It will present a nice question in city government—unless, through some arrangement, the town council and the board of directors shall be one and the same.

Thus the Greenbelt experiment will be not only an experiment in housing, but an experiment on government.

Here is what one Resettlement spokesman has to say about some of the reasons for Greenbelt:

"One of the most significant aspects of the whole venture, and to some of us the outstanding thing, is that fact that we shall know the initial costs and the maintenance and operation costs from the very beginning. We shall have a town in which any extravagances that occur or may have occurred (and we think they are negligible) will be revealed instead of being covered up in the usual fashion in a confused pyramid of mysterious municipal debt.

"We shall know what each public utility has cost to install and what it costs to operate. We shall know what the dwellings cost and what it will cost to keep them in repair—and apropos of this we have calculated on reducing maintenance and repair to a minimum and in so doing have allowed our houses to be above the level of what people call 'cheap.'"

Greenbelt, it appears, is intended to be another "yardstick." The Resettlement spokesman said:

"Nothing, we think, can be more advantageous for the cities of the country than to have such towns as those we are building, set apart, clearly visible with respect to their physical characteristics, and general and detailed costs, the conveniences and comforts they afford and also all of the disadvantages which may appear and all of the mistakes which we may have made.

"We are not ashamed of these projects; we insist that they must be carried through to successful completion and operation; and some of us believe that the business men of the country later will indorse them as invaluable measuring sticks in the effort to eliminate the absurdities and economic maladjustments of urban communities."

Question Of Censorship

By William Lyon Phelps.

Books, Plays, Movies.

Should there be a censorship for books, plays, movies, etc.?

The argument for it is that as the wickedness of human nature is such that a pure food law is necessary, for there are plenty of people who would sell poison for money, so it is necessary to see that pure mental and spiritual food should also be provided.

The argument against it is that it is easier to determine whether physical food is or is not pure than it is to judge in the same fashion of books and plays.

There is another argument. It is a good thing to have the quality of food regulated by scientific methods; but in every field of art, liberty is essential to progress.

Whatever may be the best policy elsewhere, I do not think a censorship in the United States is either practicable or desirable.

* * * *

In Great Britain they have the best possible kind of censorship, if you admit that any kind is good. The censor is one man, the Lord High Chamberlain, a tremendous swell. He is, as he ought to be, autocratic and irresponsible. He looks at the manuscript and forbids the publication of the book or the production of the play, and that is that. There is no appeal. He never explains, he replies to no questions, and the affair is settled. Although it is probable that a majority of writers and theatrical men are opposed to the censorship, not all of them are. I had a conference in London with a little group of them. They said they liked the censorship for the stage. They knew in advance if the thing was forbidden and so they spent no money on it; and if it were allowed, no fanatic, no committee of cranks, could stop it.

In the United States, a book is forbidden by one judge and called obscene. This gives it a tremendous advertisement. Public curiosity is aroused. Then another judge says it is all right and the book appears and has an enormous sale. There is almost always some way to get around a decision and turn a liability into an asset.

Mrs. Bennett Leaves Friday To Visit Son

Jurist's Wife Is Spending Few Days With Her Daughter Here.

Will Join Husband in Pittsburgh Later to Continue Travels.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Mrs. John Bennett, who with Judge Bennett has been on a trip to New York and New England, has returned to Washington for a short visit with her son-in-law and daughter, the Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Emanuel H. Dimitriu. She will go Friday to Maryland to visit her son, Mr. Richard Rae Bennett, at The Meadows in the Maryland mountains.

Judge Bennett remained in Philadelphia and will go from there to Pittsburgh, after which Mrs. Bennett will join him again and they will continue their summer travels.

They left the capital about a month ago for New York City, where they stayed for a time and took a boat trip up the Hudson. Later, they went to Boston and returned by water to New York City.

Mrs. Bennett declared she enjoyed every minute of the trip. She and Judge Bennett took their customary walk of about 2 miles every day and found the weather cool and pleasant most of the time they were away.

Judge and Mrs. Bennett are among the few remaining "cave dwellers" in Washington. They came here after their marriage 40 years ago and have maintained homes here and in Baltimore, where their son and daughter spent most of their childhood. Judge and Mrs. Bennett divide their time between the two cities when they are not traveling.

Mrs. Bennett's family has been identified with this section since early Colonial days. Her maternal ancestor, Sir James Hunter, was one of the first settlers of Virginia and received a grant of land in Virginia extending from where Fairfax Courthouse now stands, to the Potomac River. Mrs. Bennett is the former Miss Marta Rae, of Scotch descent on her father's side, and a native of Kentucky.

Judge Bennett is of English descent, the first generation of his family to live in the United States. He is now a judge sitting on cases for the Federal Trade Commission and also is author of several works on international law and economics. A new book, "Truth in Economics, an Elementary Study of Principles and Practices," came off the press only last month.

Mrs. Bennett also writes and a few years ago published many poems and short stories.

Their daughter, Mme. Dimitriu, is noted as an author, writing under her maiden name of Patricia Poe Bennett, and their son, a Baltimore newspaperman, is likewise well known as the author of both books and plays.

During the social season, when Mrs. Bennett is here and a guest at receptions and teas, there is always a group of friends gathered around her, eager to welcome her back to the Capital and chat with her, so she holds a little court of her own wherever she goes.

E. C. Ewens Sail for Naval Post in Brazil

Several Officers Picked for Mission Will Leave Soon.

Stuart A. Manahans Due to Embark at New York Aug. 15.

Navy ranks in Washington are again being somewhat depleted—as they have been every year since 1918—by the departure of several officials assigned to the United States Naval Mission in Brazil. This is a four-year assignment and the appointees who are married will be accompanied by their wives and families.

Lieut. Comdr. E. C. Ewen and Mrs. Ewen, and Commander E. E. Brady are already on their way. They sailed from New York on Saturday aboard the steamship Western World, of the Munson Line, which stops at Rio de Janeiro, Santos, and Buenos Aires. They will disembark at the Bralizian capital, where their headquarters will be for the next four years.

When the liner Southern Cross pulls out of the East River on August 15, she will have among her passengers several other members of the Mission. They include Commander Stuart A. Manahan, and Mrs. Manahan, with their 15-year-old daughter; Lieut. Comdr. Charles Russell Pratt, and Lieut. Comdr. Felix Johnson. The latter will be accompanied by Mrs. Johnson, their two daughters, the Misses Doyen and Felicia Johnson, and by Mrs. Johnson's mother, Mrs. C. H. Doyen. Lieut. Comdr. Johnson and his family have been residing at 2925 Glover driveway.

According to the Navy Department, members of the Mission cooperate with the Ministry of Marine in Brazil and serve in an advisory capacity to marine and naval officials of that country. The first mission was sent in 1918 under the command of the late Rear Admiral Carl Bogelgesang.

Two naval officials well known in Washington are already in Rio de Janeiro, and will join the mission upon arrival of the other members. They are Commander Charles C. Gill and Commander Francis Craven.

Emily N. Blair Returns From Speaking Tour

Addressed Women in Five Michigan Cities in Week.

Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, wife of Mr. Harry W. Blair, an assistant Attorney General, has returned from Michigan, where she spent a week on a speaking tour for the Democratic Party. She addressed groups of women in Detroit, Lansing, Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo and Ann Arbor.

Mrs. Blair had not intended to start her campaigning so early but requests for her came from Michigan, where she has spoken every election year since 1920, and she responded.

"The interest of women there in affairs of Government has increased 100 per cent over that I found in 1932," said Mrs. Blair. "There were fine audiences, composed of women of both parties, indicating a willingness on the part of women leaders to be informed on both sides of the question."

Mrs. Blair went to Michigan by train and made her tour of the State by motor. She was the guest for two nights of Mrs. James MacDonald, vice chairman of the Michigan Democratic State Committee, at her country home near Ypsilanti. Mrs. MacDonald is also a vice-president general of the D. A. R.

Many women who have been active in previous campaigns are now in office and Mrs. Blair found in Michigan a number of young women actively engaged in work for the party.

Are You Serious About Renting Your Vacant Room?

You can't be serious about renting your vacancy if you're depending on a small sign in your window to find a tenant. After all, how many room-hunters pass your home each day? And how many see your vacancy sign? Does the sign tell if your vacancy has cross ventilation; whether there is running water in the room; whether it's newly furnished? Does it tell whether you have a double or single room—and how much the rent is? A sign is indefinite. But, for as little as 54 cents, a small ad in The Post's widely read Room Column will put your vacancy before the eyes of room-hunters who ARE interested in renting a room. MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Piqued by Fiancee's Going With Another Man, Youth Decides to Marry Another Girl; Asks Counsel.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My home is in Greensboro, N. C., and three months ago I came to Baltimore, Md., to take a job. I had been going with a girl in my home town for three years and we were engaged to be married soon. When I went home on a visit two weeks ago I discovered she had been going out with another man. I love the girl and she tells me she loves me, but in view of what I learned, I came back here and started going out with another girl. I like this girl, but she can never mean as much to me as the first one. Anyhow, I have asked her to marry me, even so, and we have set the date for September. I had given the first girl an engagement ring, which I don't expect to ask her to give back to me. I am now thinking of buying this other girl a ring. Do you think I should? Please tell me what to do. G. G. H.

* * * *

DEAR G. G. H.: The thing to do is not to be a fool. Why cut off your nose to spite your face by marrying a girl you scarcely know and are not in love with, simply as a childish means of getting even with your No. 1 fiancee? If you haven't asked for the return of your ring from the home-town girl, it must be that your engagement still stands, nominally at least, so that you are not ethically free to become engaged to another girl. Your conduct is just as bad as your fiancee's, in my opinion.

After all, she committed no crime in going out with another man in your absence, although it may have been a thoughtless and, from your point of view, an unnecessary and unkind thing to do. If you are in a position to marry in September, and still love the home-town girl, the common-sense thing to do is to talk things out with her, try to get together on a basis of better understanding, and marry her, if she will consent.

I think you had better tell the second girl the truth—that you asked her to marry you in a fit of pique at your fiancee; that you don't love her; and that you do care for the former girl friend. Ask her to forgive you and to dismiss from her mind any thought of taking you seriously. I would certainly never advise anyone's marrying a person he does not love; most particularly not when he still believes himself to be in love with someone else. M. H.

"I Am the Girl."

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have just read your column in The Post of July 30. I am the girl who was left at home while this young man of 30 took the widow out. He would have married me, on condition that I work outside the home; that I have no children, and that I be willing to help him with his work. There would have been no time spent in enjoying the beautiful things in life.

* * * *

While I was going with him, I often helped him with work that was difficult for him: different varieties of office work and some that was not office work, such as sewing up rips in the fabric covering of an airplane wing. The work required much time, effort and patience. I was rewarded with miserliness, an unkempt appearance and very little consideration otherwise. But I was young, foolish and much infatuated with him. I've learned how miserable an uncongenial man can make a girl. The widow works in the evening, otherwise I would have spent more time alone.

Of course I refused to marry him. But not because he wouldn't give up airplanes. Who am I to dare to direct the course of anyone's life? I only wanted him to play a little, as the hours he kept were ruining his health. I tried to show him how unwise he was in being dominated by his father.

Since unconsciously he judges every woman by the widow, who likes being bossed by him, and who will do anything he says, I believe he would be very happy married to her. He is older than his years anyway. She makes him very comfortable and is a wonderful cook.

* * * *

When I began going with the man to whom I am now very happily married he tried to break it up. I almost let him. You'll never know how thankful I am that I had sense enough to marry a real man, who accepts his adult responsibilities and who takes both work and play in his stride. Sincerely, D. J.

* * * *

DEAR D. J.—I wonder if you are the girl referred to in the letter signed "Anxious" which was published in this column last Thursday. You may be, and then again you may not. This is not the first time a reader has written in to identify himself with a character outlined in some other correspondent's letter, but more often than not his connection with the particular case is purely imaginary. However, it is interesting to have your side of the story; and if you are, indeed, one and the same girl, I am happy to have you corroborate my own opinion that the 30-year-old man will probably be quite happy married to the 55-year-old widow. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Keeping Child 'Little' Unjust To All Family

Habits Should Be Guided Progressively by Parent for Normal Result.

By Alice Clarisa Richmond.

At 10, Mary always asked permission to go places, or invite her friend in; was told what to wear, what to read, what movies to attend. Every night she was sent to bed at 9 and tucked in and kissed by her parents; in the morning she waked her parents with a romp. When she went visiting she was homesick; if she was unhappy she cried over her father's shirtfront; angry, she stormed and wept with abandon.

All in all she was a normal, happy child.

But when Mary at 19 and 20 was still living according to these same early habits, she had ceased to be either normal or happy.

Nineteen should not ask permission to go out, should no longer be guided in reading, and should have learned to leave home without enduring the agonies of homesickness.

It is the duty of the parents to see to this.

Many parents like to "keep their little girls" or "little boys," as the case may be. Sometimes the children refuse to be kept in leading-strings and the result is heart-ache for both old and young.

The child is right, however. He must rid himself of the habits of childhood if he is ever to stand on his own feet.

There are many children, however, most of them girls, who prefer the sheltered life, and all their lives hang on to the manners and privileges as well as the restrictions of childhood. One sees old ladies afraid to move without an escort, unable to attend to money matters, deferring to the opinions of men simply because they are men, and therefore wise and strong—just as they always believed their fathers were.

The child who will not leave the security of childhood must be forced out of the nest, and the sooner his parents realize the need and act upon it the better.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth McRae Boykin.

ON THE WHOLE we think that the happiest couples include one merry little spitfire and one strong arm man. The famous first Duke of Marlborough had a perfect termagant for a wife, but he was fond and faithful, and she was a decided asset because of her shrewdness.

A pair we know very well indeed are like that. She's a little chatterbox who's likely to fly off the handle over anything from a curtain rod to a bed spring. And he's big and calm and gentle, but very firm and takes her in hand when she needs it.

They have a very pleasant home . . . becoming to her, too—she's a grey-eyed blonde. The bedroom has sun-tan walls, light blue satin bedspreads and draperies, sun-tan colored carpet just the color of the walls, and laid all the way to the baseboards. The dressing table has a skirt of blue satin, too, but the chairs are in a flowered material that's quite modern but colorful, with flashes of magenta in it.

The furniture is modern, too, in off white enamel finish and copper colored hardware; the lines are simple and rounded and more graceful than more strictly modern furniture. She has added some modern flower pictures in very clear, bright, light colorings—framed with wide mats and copper colored frames. The lamps are white and copper and the dressing table appointments are crystal.

The closet of this room is interesting. It has blue painted walls and woodwork, the same light blue as is used for spread and draperies in the bedroom, then garment bags, hat boxes and shelf edging are all in magenta.

Will It Be Mulligan Stew for Supper?

Post Staff Photo.

Scouts D. N. Burbank and Dean Rose, of Troop 23, discuss their supper menu for the day as they light the fire and set the stew to cook. These boys have mastered the art of outdoor cookery and with the aid of a camp fire and heavy iron kettle can turn out a savory hot dish that is fit for a king.

Summer Camp Fire Meal More Fun Than Cold Variety

Everyday Foods From Pantry or Refrigerator Most Preferred By Youngsters for Open-air Cooking.

By Dorothea Duncan.

IT ISN'T SURPRISING that boys and girls who have enjoyed a summer session in a Scout camp should look with disapproving gaze upon mother's picnic luncheon which consists entirely of cold foods. These members of the teen age have been taught at camp to master the art of outdoor cookery, and to them a picnic is not a success unless it gives opportunity for a camp fire and foods cooked in the open.

These outdoor meals cooked via scout artistry are really more fun than the kind which have been labored over in the kitchen and dragged miles into the hills and wooded places before they can be eaten. And a picnic meal cooked according to the approved scout method means much less work for mother, for it divides the responsibility of preparation among the entire family.

Plans for a meal to be cooked in the open can not be made helter-skelter. The usual picnic plates, napkins, cups and silverware will be required. But cooking utensils, too, must be carried. A heavy frying pan will be necessary for bacon and eggs, a wire grill for steaks or chops, a sharp knife for pointing sticks for hot dogs or marshmallows, a pot of coffee and a pail for carrying water. All smaller cooking utensils can be packed carefully in the water pail for carrying.

Everyday foods from pantry shelf or refrigerator are the ones preferred by boy or girl scout for cooking over the camp fire. The following recipes are some of the popular ones taught this summer in one of the Young Women's Christian Association camp cooker classes.

Witch in a Blanket.

Split finger rolls on one side and fill with nippy cheese. Wrap entire roll with bacon strips and skewer with a long, sharp-pointed stick. Hold over camp fire until bacon is crisp and cheese inside roll is melted. Eat piping hot.

Corn and Bacon Saute.

Cut bacon into fine dice and place in heavy frying pan. Hold over camp fire until bacon is crisp. Then add golden bantam corn freshly cut from the cob. Saute corn with bacon for a few minutes or until tender. A bit of onion or green pepper or both chopped fine and added when the bacon is cooking gives a delicious contrast of flavors.

Kabobs.

Take one long stick with sharp pointed end for every kabob. On the end of each stick insert an inch cube of steak, a cube of bacon and a piece of onion of like size. Add another portion of steak, bacon and onion. Broil over open fire until steak and onion are tender and bacon is crisp. Add seasonings after cooking. Be sure steak cubes are just 1 inch square.

Biscuit Thumbs.

Mix prepared biscuit flour with the required amount of water. Form thumb shaped biscuit at the end of sticks about finger thickness. Toast these biscuits over glowing coals until a pleasant brown. When the biscuit becomes loose it is baked through. Remove from stick and fill with jam or jelly.

Angels on Horseback (For Dessert).

Toast marshmallows until a golden brown. Lay each marshmallow on top of a single Graham cracker. Cover with a piece of milk chocolate and top with another Graham cracker. Press together to melt chocolate.

Ginger Ale Uses Topic of Week's Recipe Contest

THIS week the spotlight is being turned upon ginger ale, for this popular beverage has been chosen as the theme of the current Post recipe contest.

First popular as the ideal background for mixed drinks and punches, ginger ale is earning new laurels as a popular ingredient in jellied salads, fruit cups and frozen desserts.

Dorothea Duncan hopes that the entries this week will reveal many new and interesting recipes which include ginger ale as an important ingredient.

Cash prizes will be awarded the five best recipes entered this week. The first prize will be $5, the second, $3, and the remaining prizes $1 each.

Send your favorite recipes, using ginger ale as an important ingredient to Dorothea Duncan, in care of The Washington Post. Be sure to mail your recipes in time to reach this office not later than Saturday morning.

The prize winners in last week's contest for baked ham recipes will be announced on the food page tomorrow.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Cologne, Talcum of Same Fragrance Desired by Most Women.

By Mignon.

(The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.)

MIXED fragrances are never especially desirable. Fastidious women don't like using them, and their friends don't like the combinations unless they are exceptional and suited to each other.

There is a fine cologne on the market today, one of the least expensive of the better colognes. It comes in a tall bottle sealed with a tiny ribbon at the cork. There is a talcum to match the fragrances in which you can but it. I have tried the mimosa and the lilac. It's a most elegant feeling that the use of them leaves after a bath, and they cost what I would say is about the minimum for such luxuries.

I like, when I use an after-bath cologne or toilet water, to feel that I can swish it all over me without being cruel to people who need things more necessary than fragrances. That is why I recommend these inexpensive and very nice products. Your conscience won't hurt you if you use a sixth of a bottle to a bath. And another way to use it, is toss some into the bath water (unless you take showers).

Men Replacing Women Teachers

By the Associated Press.

Salt Lake City, Aug. 2.—Women as school teachers are being replaced by men in many cases and liking it, B. A. Fowler, secretary of the Utah Education Association, said today. The movement to substitute men for women educators appeared National, he added.

"In Utah the trend, in high schools and junior high schools, in recent years has been quite distinct," Mr. Fowler asserted. "The same is true in so many other States that the change has real significance.

"Perhaps the depression sent many men, unable to afford expensive courses in medicine and law, into the educational field. But once in the profession, hundreds have discovered that they like the work, that salaries are on the increase and that they can be of real service to mankind."

What about the schoolma'ams pushed out of the field?

Many are marrying, and in Utah not a few were marrying the men who took their jobs, said Mr. Fowler. Others become stenographers, milliners, clerks—occupations they often prefer to teaching.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

The American Disease.

Many letters each day ask about high blood pressure—its whys, wherefores and what to do. It is an important symptom and we have had much to say about prevention. Fully half of all hypertension victims may be helped materially by heeding a three-word formula—"take it easy." This means learning how to relax and rest and at the same time carry on needed activity.

There is a popular misconception that blood pressure is stable; that it remains at a given level in each individual. This is not so at all. The fact is that the body is so constructed that if the need presents itself the blood pressure can rise quickly to meet an emergency. Furthermore, scarcely anyone will show exactly the same pressure at any two periods of the day. In the morning, after a good night's sleep, the reading may be 110, but after a conference with the boss at the factory up it may go to 130. During great excitement the rise may be 20 to 30 points or more. The one whose pressure normally ranges between 120 and 130 but who develops a rise to 160 occasionally, has nothing to worry about. This frequently occurs during an examination by the physician, or when being checked for life insurance.

How can we explain the circumstances which bring about a gradual but steady increase in pressure when there is no evidence of kidney damage, heart disease or hardening of the blood vessels? The cause can be laid probably at the doorstep of an overactive nervous system.

A. B. Walter, in a recent article, notes that phlegmatic races—those pursuing a well-balanced program of living, without much stress or strain—rarely show a pressure that could be considered even normal for one of us. For example, the blood pressure of Chinese has been found to average from 20 to 30 millimeters lower than that of Americans. The average reading for Hindus is about 100. An examination of 1,000 African natives failed to disclose a single case of hypertension. Surely these data are significant as showing that greater mental activity—with an excess load on the nervous systems—means higher levels.

The doctrine that a diet containing a fair amount of meat is a dominant cause appears to be exploded by the fact that Stoffensen, the Arctic explorer, lived for the major portion of each of nine years on meat alone. His systolic pressure did not rise at any time above 115. On the other hand, Knud Faber, of Copenhagen reports that one of his patients who had been a strict vegetarian for over 12 years had a systolic pressure of over 220. Fats and carbohydrates have also been blamed without proof, although the effect of the excess consumption of common salt—sodium chloride—remains to be carefully evaluated.

One of the worst things that can happen to anyone is to be told that he has high blood presure and that the condition is dangerous. If he has been a mild worrier before the "news" breaks he will be transformed promptly into a persistent one. No one who has an increased pressure should be told about it, or at least in a way which will bring apprehension, introspection or concern.

But after all, rest and the cultivation of an even temperament will do more than all the drugs that can be administered. This does not mean that the patient should go to bed for long stays—weeks or months—but that each day should be made up of alternating rest and work periods. An hour or two flat on one's back after the noon lunch is more effective than double the time spent in bed at night.

There is a difference also in the character of rest. If one is compelled to answer the telephone or the door bell, take in a package or listen to a blatting radio the program defeats itself. The English custom of afternoon tea is healthful—not because of the tea, but because it affords a break in the routine of the day and is relaxing. Perhaps a patient will say that he cannot afford the time. In such cases adding two or more hours to the night's rest is advised. It may be wise also to use small doses of bromides to slow up a bit one's racing thoughts.

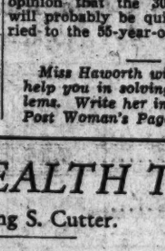
Budgeting Your Income

"WHERE DOES our money go?" Gloomily, indignantly, desperately that question is asked every day in millions of American homes.



Plan a budget! That's the answer. Stop the little leaks that drain your cash away.

But you can't do a lot of finicky bookkeeping every day? Of course you can't! That isn't what budgeting means.

Your budget is your plan for getting what you want most. Use the experience of a lot of other people in spending your income. They've learned what proportion of income should go for rent, clothes, savings, amusements.

You don't need to "measure your oats by the other fellow's half bushel." Not to the last detail. But the other fellow's experience is a big help, just the same.

Here's how a budget plan works. You decide what means most to you, a lot of trips in the car, a large, roomy house or apartment, nice clothes. Then apportion your income on a definite plan, so much for rent, clothes, food, life insurance, and so on. If you wish to economize on food, buy according to a "balanced menu;" chosen to keep up family health.

Don't be a waster and a drifter. Be going some place with a budget plan. Our 40-page booklet, HOW TO BUDGET YOUR INCOME, offers a sound plan. Provides blank bookkeeping sheets. Gives budgets from real life. Plans to fit all incomes.

Send for our booklet, HOW TO BUDGET YOUR INCOME, to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

One-Man Cars Are Attacked By Labor Union

They Contribute to Unemployment, Organization Tells P. U. C.

A tree-point attack on the proposal of the Capital Transit Co. to add 40 one-man street cars to its system was made yesterday by the Central Labor Union in a memorandum filed with the Public Utilities Commission.

The union, which opposed the petition at a recent public hearing, summed up its arguments against the plan as follows:

One-man cars are more productive of accidents and slower than two-man cars. They contribute to unemployment.

They are more difficult to operate.

The commission is without authority to grant the application because of the 1892 statute requiring two men on every trolley.

Regarding the labor aspect, the memorandum stated:

"One-man cars tend to make worse the most severe problem this country has to face, that of unemployment. One of the chief causes for the existence today of 11,000,000 unemployed persons is labor-saving equipment."

The brief was prepared by Charles Ogburn, attorney for the Central Labor Union.

Other briefs will be filed this week by People's Counsel William A. Roberts and the Capital Transit Co.

Entire SEC Personnel Will Go on River Cruise

The first night river cruise for the entire personnel of the SEC will take place Thursday night on the City of Washington of the Wilson Line. The boat is scheduled to leave the Seventh street wharf at 8:30 p. m. and sail up and down the Potomac, making no stops.

The cruise, one of a series of social events for SEC employes, is under direction of Lorenzo Z. Kidder, general chairman of social activities. The general sponsor of the outing, George Otis Spencer, is being assisted in making arrangements by Miss Ruth Greene, an assistant administrator, and by a committee representing various sub-divisions of the commission.

Police Investigate Plot to Wreck Train

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 3.—Southern Railway police today were investigating the attempt to wreck the southbound Washington-Harrisonburg passenger train by throwing a switch at a siding near Linville, 5 miles north of here, Saturday afternoon.

The train was stopped on the main tracks by Engineer O. G. Garr after he noticed the switch point in the diretcion of the main tracks.

Had the train of four coaches gone around the sharp siding curve leading to a lime plant, railroad men believe it would have toppled over.

A freight from Alexandria passed over the siding two hours before the passenger train arrived, indicating the switch was thrown between noon and 2 p. m. Saturday.

Reports were the switch lock showed signs of having been battered open and the switch then thrown.

FrenchNation's Fiscal Problem Topic of Parley

Bank of France Governor Confers With Head of Reichsbank.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Aug. 3.—A first step in a three-point program of conferences on France's fiscal troubles was taken tonight by Emile Labeyrie, governor of the Bank of France, at a meeting with Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the German Reichsbank. Later, Labeyrie will see the banking heads of Holland and England.

(Labeyrie is on a mission of "stabilization." This was variously interpreted in Paris when he left. The government of Premier Leon Blum is committed to defend the present value of the franc—6.63 cents—but for more than a year there has been a hot fight in France over the danger of a forced devaluation because the government lacks funds and borrows heavily.

(Some financial quarters thought Labeyrie seeks an agreement for a planned devaluation to avoid the disastrous effects of a possible panic some day during a slump in the French financial market.

(French governmental financiers long have contended France ought not to devalue—if that course ever were taken—unless Great Britain and the United States agreed not to devalue further and agreed to cooperate in the stabilization of the franc at a new rate. The devaluation suggested was down to 75 to 80 per cent of the present value.)

What Labeyrie said to Schacht was not disclosed, but it was believed the substance of the conversation would be enlarged upon later in Amsterdam and London.

In Holland, Labeyrie is expected to see Dr. L. J. A. Trip, governor of the Bank of the Netherlands, who also is president of the Bank for International Settlements.

In England, the French authority plans to confer with Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England.

France, Holland and Switzerland are considered the three principal European gold-standard nations, and any change in the status of any of the three countries, it was felt, would have to be accomplished after a mutual understanding.

Report Heir to Throne Is in Spain Is Scouted

Cannes, France, Aug. 3 (AP).—Members of the household of the Prince of Asturia, heir-apparent to the non-existent Spanish throne, today scoffed at unconfirmed reports he had been seen on the streets of Pamplona.

(A report published in La Petite Gironde in Bordeaux that Prince Juan was seen in the Spanish city and had jonied the rebel army was not authenticated by any other source.)

Persons close to him said he had gone to Czechoslovakia to meet his father, former King Alfonso, and would return to Cannes Wednesday.

Raids in Ethiopia.

Port Said, Egypt, Aug. 3 (AP).—Ethiopian armies are encircling Addis Ababa, reports reaching here said today, and harassing the Italian army of occupation with numerous raids along the railroad to Dessye.

The report also told of an attack on Addis Ababa last week. The Ethiopions were said to have retreated after a 36-hour battle.

Ruhland Acts To Offset Rise In Milk Price

Distributors Invited to Conference Today by Health Officer.

Necessity for Increase Denied as Supply Is Held Adequate.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland today will enter the local milk controversy in a conference designed to offset the threatened increase in prices.

Just back from a month's vacation, Dr. Ruhland yesterday invited representatives of the eight milk distributors in Washington to a parley at 10 a. m. today in his office. While he has no direct control over milk prices in the District, the health officer is in a position to forestall a price increase through a change in regulations, the study of which has been ordered by the District Commissioners.

Dr. Ruhland said health department inspectors had informed him there was an adequate milk supply in this area and no apparent necessity for increasing prices. He added that he had received unofficial information that the local distributers are opposed to raising the price.

After conferring with the retailers, the health officer will call a conference of wholesalers.

People's Counsel William A. Roberts, speaking over Station WOL last night on the local milk problem, submitted data to counteract the complaint that drought conditions in Maryland and Virginia were responsible for the demand for a price rise.

He said the Weather Bureau reported that the rainfall in the milk shed that serves this territory was 27.83 inches up to July 31. This compares with 26.48 inches as the normal over the last 50 years.

"In other words, instead of a drought there is an excess of about 1½ inches of rainfall in this territory," he said.

Commenting on the economic condition of the area that produces Washington's milk supply, Roberts cited figures on purchases of new automobiles and trucks as evidence that Washington's prosperity was reflected on the dairy farms.

Organization Urged.

He suggested that the people of the District "should build up their own organization to protect themselves in disputes of this kind where dollars and cents are distinctly worth while and where a policy of non-resistance is likely to prove disastrous."

While preparing to carry out the Commissioners' instructions regarding a study of District milk regulations to determine whether they are "unreasonably" rigid, Dr. Ruhland stated:

"I do not intend to lower the standard required of milk production in the slightest degree."

He said there appeared to be no great difference between District milk production standards and those incorporated in a model milk code sponsored by the Public Health Service.

Although the Commissioners in their resolution hinted at the possibility of importing milk from other sheds, Dr. Ruhland said his information indicated there was no necessity for such action.

'Rags' Warring Denies Assault On Bootlegger

Held for Grand Jury Action on Assault Count; Bail Reduction Refused.

Charles ("Rags") Warring, termed a Georgetown bootlegger by the police, pleaded not guilty and was held for grand jury action yesterday when arraigned in Police Court on a charge of assault with intent to kill.

Judge John P. McMahon, after a plea by Charles E. Ford, Warring's attorney, that bond be reduced, ordered bail continued at $20,000—the same as had been set following Warring's arrest Saturday.

Warring was arrested by Detective Sergt. Thomas McVearry and Detective Lieut. Clement Cox at Seventh and G streets northwest. He was charged in connection with the racket shooting of Joseph Edward O'Brien, shot three times in the legs July 21 in front of a lunchroom in the 200 block Second street southeast.

Ford's plea for reduction of the bond was based on the contention that Warring had no police record other than minor traffic violations. Police records presented to Judge McMahon showed Warring had been convicted in 1932 of transportation and possession of illegal liquor. In 1933, the record shows, a murder charge was lodged against him as a result of the shooting of Joseph Nalley, gangster, in the Cotton Club. The grand jury ignored this charge. Another charge of accessory after the fact in murder was nolle prossed in 1934.

Judge McMahon said he recalled the case in which Warring was charged. He said:

"This promiscuous shooting on the streets of Washington must stop. I see no reason why I should reduce this bond, and if the other three men arrested last week had appeared before me their bonds would not have been reduced. The bond will stand at $20,000."

In regard to the other three men, Judge McMahon referred to Samuel "Monty" Montgomery, Samuel Bond and George F. Tear, arrested and charged with assault last week. They were placed under $20,000 bail, which was reduced to $10,000 by Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran.

Ford told the court the police had taken Warring to Providence Hospital to face O'Brien. The police said O'Brien identified Warring as the man who struck him on the head just before he was shot.

Warring, whom the police called co-leader of the Georgetown Warring mob, is alleged to have participated in the shooting of O'Brien, small time Southeast bootlegger, who was "put on the spot" for "muscling in" on the illicit Northwest liquor trade controlled by the Warrings.

The police are still searching for three other members of the gang accused of complicity in the crime.

Physician Present At Their Birth Sees Boy, Girl Married

Dr. Clarence A. Weaver attended them both at birth.

Saturday they were married—Peggy Jean Holmes and John C. Cain, both of Hyattsville.

Dr. Weaver, practicing physician of this city for nearly half a century, attended their wedding.

Also at the wedding were Richard Cain, brother of the bridegroom, and Charlotte Wells, of Cherrydale, Va.

Dr. Weaver attended them, too, at birth.

"It was kind of like a family reunion," Dr. Weaver said last night. "I feel they all are my children. I didn't even know Richard and Charlotte were going to be there, but inasmuch as I've brought about 2,000 into the world, I guess the law of averages would put four of them together—unknowingly—just once."

Bowling Alley Looted.

The Lucky Strike bowling alley, 1700 block Fourteenth street northwest, was broken into early yesterday and $277 taken from the safe which had been left unlocked, according to police reports.

Gardner Silent On Soviet Trip, Talks of Eclipse

D. C. Scientist Refuses to Comment on Travels to Photograph Sun.

A Washingtonian who returned recently after two months' stay in Russia, refuses to make any comment on the world's most controversial country.

The reason is that he is a scientist. He traveled 12,000 miles to Ak Bulak in the treeless steppes of western Siberia to make eight photographs.

He is Dr. Irvine C. Gardner, 46, of the optometrist section, Bureau of Standards. He traveled a quarter way around the globe for the bureau and the National Geographic Society to make the first complete set of colored photographs ever taken of an eclipse of the sun and its mysterious corona. His wife, Mrs. Merriel M. Gardner, also a scientist, went with him.

The camera he used was of his own design. It has a 9-inch lens and is 14 feet long. When set up it looks like an aluminum telescope. He designed it thus so he would be able to obtain "relatively large images of the sun with relatively short exposures." It is also easier to set up than most eclipse cameras, he explained, being much smaller.

Engrossed in Work.

When interviewed last night at his home at 12 Shepherd street, Chevy Chase, Md., Dr. Gardner was modest about his achievements. He has sandy hair, looks younger than his years and seems deeply engrossed in his work, even when not in the laboratory. His greeting over, his home telephone is "Optometrist section—Gardner."

He took eight pictures, six of them colored, ranging from 1 to 16 seconds exposure. The latter showed pearly pencils of light extending well over a million miles from the surface of the sun.

The preparation for taking 117 seconds of pictures—the length of time the sun was in total eclipse—extended over a year and a half. The apparatus was built by the Bureau of Standards—from the sand for the glass in the lens to the completed camera.

Dr. Gardner and his wife were on the scene for three weeks before the eclipse, setting up their camera and checking and rechecking to be sure that there would be no slip. They rehearsed the taking of the pictures until they were able to use as much as 56 out of the 117 seconds for actual exposures. The rest of the time was used in changing plate holders and replacing dark slides.

Sky Overcast.

Although the spot was picked by Soviet scientists as one of the least cloudy places in the path of the eclipse, the sky was overcast until within three hours of the event. Luck, however, was with Gardner and the clouds cleared away just in time.

Asked if he didn't feel somewhat like an Olympic star who has trained for more than a year for a performance which lasts only a few seconds, he said:

"Yes, if you fail that once, you don't get another chance."

He said he hadn't slept much the night before, but not because he was nervous or had nightmares. He had to work in the dark room until 2:30 a. m. and then get up at 5 o'clock.

After it was all over he and his wife spent a pleasant three weeks touring the Soviet Union. But Dr. Gardner refused last night to be drawn into any comment. He said he was not a political observer and thus anything he said would be necessarily superficial.

The only definite remark was: "It was as hot as Washington."

Burglars Take $639 From Grocery Store

Cash and checks valued at $639.49 were stolen from a Sanitary grocery store in the 1600 block of Montello avenue northeast over the week-end, Charles J. McCloskey, manager of the store, told police.

McCloskey said the thief entered the building through a coal chute in the cellar and opened the safe with a duplicate key. Police think the theft was an "inside job."

U. S. Parole System Is Best, Says Ex-Aid of Scotland Yard

Inspector and Mrs. Charles E. Leich, and Capt. Ira Keck.

The parole system in the United States is superior to that of Great Britain because the reformed prisoner, upon release, has more opportunity to "go straight" and find work, Inspector Charles Edward Leich, retired chief of the International Thieves and Confidence Squad of Scotland Yard, said yesterday.

Inspector Leich, who now holds his own detective agency in London, arrived in Washington yesterday for a two-day visit, and last night was the guest of Capt. Ira Keck, assistant chief of detectives, at line-up at headquarters.

"Police everywhere in America seem quite alert, fearless and intelligent," observed Inspector Leich.

"I am very favorably impressed by your Washington officers," he added. "The headquarters building, however, seems somehow inadequate."

Inspector Leich was accompanied by his wife, Mrs. Constance Leich. For 28 years he served on the force of Scotland Yard, winning a reputation for his excellent photographs of crimes, clews and criminals. His father was an inspector in Scotland Yard, and so were his grandfather and great-grandfather.

Young G. O. P. Being Trained For Vocal War

Classes Being Organized in Public Speaking at D. C. Club.

A sort of Plattsburg for orators was established last night by the Young Republicans of the District of Columbia. Its graduates will be sent into the political trenches of nearby Maryland and Virginia to war on the New Deal.

At last night's opening of the class in public speaking, Dr. Harold F. Harding, a professor of public speaking at George Washington University, gave the candidates pointers on how to capture and hold an audience.

Only two Young Republicans were prepared to try out their oratorical powers.

Miss Mildred Coray, speaking in a clear but low voice, criticized the New Deal for borrowing strange political nostrums from foreign countries.

"We are Americans and we want to be governed as Americans," she said.

Dr. Harding said her speech was well prepared, but he thought it would have been better if it had not been so polished. He said it "smelled of a lamp." He felt, too, that it would have impressed the audience more if she had not depended so much on the manuscript. Some of the young men thought she also made a mistake in allowing a large hat to shadow her pretty features.

The other orator was Bradford Swope, vice president of the Young Republicans. His friends say he can make a spirited speech if he doesn't try too hard. Last night he tried too hard. He, too, had a carefully prepared manuscript, and in reading it he lost his accustomed fire.

At the suggestion of Dr. Harding, the other oratorical neophytes took turns criticizing Swope's speech. They thought he asked too many rhetorical questions and answered too few. He had asked in his paper, "Which Way Shall We Go?" and he was still asking when his speech was over.

On top of this criticism, Swope arose and condemned himself. He promised that next time he would nail down only one or two questions and hammer away at them exclusively.

The course for campaign orators, held in the National Capital Republican Club, Scott Circle and Sixteenth street, will continue through August.

50 Police Cycles Will Be Equipped With Radio Sets

A 21-foot antenna was erected atop the police headquarters building yesterday in anticipation of the establishment of two-way radio communication between police cars and headquarters.

At the same time it was announced by Lieut. James Kelly, head of the department's radio division, that 50 police motorcycles will be equipped with receiving sets.

When the two-way radio is placed in operation, it will be hooked up so that Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent; Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, assistant superintendent, and the desk lieutenant at the detective bureau, as well as the regular despatcher, will be able to send and receive messages.

Union Rejects Plan for Rally On Labor Day

Demonstration Will Not Be Held Second Year in Succession.

For the second successive year the District will not have a Labor Day demonstration backed by the Central Labor Union.

A report of nonconcurrence from Charles E. Sands, chairman of the resolutions committee concerning plans for a proposed mass demonstration, was upheld by a 59-to-27 vote. The vote, a standing one, was taken after 45 minutes of debate, at the monthly meeting last night.

In submitting his report Sands advised the delegates that most people concerned about labor matters would be out of the city and only 37 days were left to make plans.

Jack Anderson, grand lodge representative of the International Association of Machinists and former vice president of the International Machinists Union, in a report on the mechanics' strike told delegates he would put up a "finish fight" to win his demands of auto dealers.

"The fight is now on a starvation basis," he said, and I ask that the C. L. U. executive board and delegates put 17 shops in the strike on the unfair list."

Magistrate's Courts Plan Is Abandoned

Law Enforcement Unit Declares Proposal Impractical.

The proposed system of establishing magistrate courts in police precincts over the city as a means of eliminating congestion in police courts was discarded yesterday by the District Commissioners following a conference with law-enforcement officials on legislation left over from the Seventy-fourth Congress.

Melvin C. Hazen, president of the board, said that there was a unanimous opinion that the plan, drafted by former Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman, is impractical.

The officials felt, Hazen said, that it would be preferable to obtain another police court judge and prosecutor and to assign one judge to traffic cases alone.

A special committee was designated to incorporate this idea in new legislation. Edward W. Thomas, assistant corporation counsel, is chairman, and other members are Lieut. George Little, head of the vice squad, and Roger Robb, assistant United States attorney.

Indorse Gambling Curb.

The committee also was instructed to bring up to date the anti-gambling bill so that it may be reintroduced in the next Congress. Since the measure was drafted, it was said, Washington numbers operators have changed their methods somewhat and often make transactions without the tell-tale slip of paper.

Lieut. Little told the parley that $100,000 is bet daily on numbers game in Washington. He described the difficulties police have in making arrests under present laws.

The antigambling bill passed the first session of the last Congress, but it was pigeon-holed by Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, chairman of a sub-committee of the House District Committee.

The conferees were divided on whether to indorse the bill which would require semiannual mechanical inspections of motor vehicles, but Hazen said the Commissioners probably will reintroduce it.

Urge Farm for Drunks.

Hazen's plan of establishing a farm for habitual drunkards also was discussed, and it was decided to sponsor it again at the next session of Congress.

All other District legislation which died with the adjournment of the Seventy-fourth Congress will be reviewed, Hazen said, and desirable proposals will be revived for reintroduction.

Present at the conference, besides Hazen, were Lieut. Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner; United State Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police; Vernon E. West, corporation counsel; Lee Fee, assistant corporation counsel; Rice Hooe, counsel of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board; Sergt. George C. Deyoe, Lieut. Little and Thomas.

Mystery Drama Of the War Is Feature at Met

Spy Play Keeps Audience Guessing to End; Cast Is a Notable One.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"SECRET AGENT." Gaumont British picturization of Campbell Dixon's play of "Ashenden," based on the novel by W. Somerset Maugham, adapted to the screen by Charles Bennett, featuring Madeleine Carroll, Peter Lorre, Robert Young and John Gielgud, with Percy Marmont, Florence Kahn, Charles Carson and Lillie Palmer. Directed by Alfred Hitchcock. Reviewed Monday afternoon.

In fashioning its mystery, spy, detective and kindred screen plays, Gaumont British is no advocate of transparency of plot. "The 39 Steps" was unguessable until its producers wished it to become lucid and the same is true of "Secret Agent," which began an advanced engagement at the Metropolitan Theater yesterday. Until the threads of the story are finally gathered together and knotted in the final few moments of the action, the dramatic fabric of the play seems of an unusually involved and difficult weave.

The story is one of espionage during the year 1916 of the great war and the scene of the action is Switzerland and southeastern Europe. The characters involved are a British spy to whose assistance a beautiful young woman and a homicidal gentleman, known only as The General, are assigned to run down a master secret agent of the Germans who is upsetting the plans of the Allies with peculiar cunning.

The progress of the story is punctuated with occasional revelations of the methods of these master minds of intrigue and trickery, no little comedy in the dialogue—and none whatever in the stage "business," which is uniformly grim—the deliberate murder of the wrong man by the blood-thirsty general and a final readjustment of the relationships of the entire party aboard a troop train bound for Constantinople.

Wreck Clarifies Plot.

Up to this time the precise pattern of the love interest has not been especially well defined. When the train is wrecked by enemy mines and all of the participants in the manhunt have been shaken up a bit, things simplify themselves considerably by the shooting of the General by Marvin, the elusive quarry in the chase, and Marvin's own death amidst the flaming debris. "Mr. and Mrs. Ashenden" are the only survivors, and one supposes that they soon will become actually Mr. and Mrs. Ashenden and stop the marital masquerade that has been carried on for official reasons only.

"Secret Agent" has been produced with a fine eye for pictorial effectiveness and a keen ear for atmospheric sound embellishments that sometimes become so dominant as to drown out the dialogue completely.

John Gielgud, a newcomer to American audiences, who will be better known soon, however, since he is articled by Guthrie McClintic to play Hamlet on Broadway in October, is quietly and efficiently restrained in the role of Ashenden, the principal spy hunter, and Robert Young offers a debonair and amusingly glib performance as the secret operative who is so eagerly sought and so long unsuspected. Returning to view after years of absence, Percy Marmont, a competent British player once greatly in demand on the American screen, appears briefly as the suspect who is killed "accidentally" by the General on a mountain climbing expedition, which strikes the General as being the year's best joke, once he has learned of his mistake.

This role of the General is, of course, the most picturesque and provocative of any in the play. It is assumed with his customary punctilious attention to every detail of realistic interpretation by Peter Lorre, who has curled his hair tightly for the occasion and wears a gold ring in one ear to indicate a completely alien breed of "trigger man." The others in the cast do not particularly matter.

Inay Ray Is Rattled.

Among the supplementary attractions of the new bill at the Met is a "Musical Fashions" short-reel subject in which Ina Ray Hutton and Her Melodears attempt to combine the best of their instrumental numbers with a full-fledged parade of feminine wearing apparel. It is a little startling to observe how self-conscious and ill at ease Miss Hutton can be before the cameras and microphone. The skit scores, nevertheless, with its spirited tunes and fashion revue, ending with a bathing-suit novelty that winds up in a swimming pool—an agreeably refreshing suggestion on a hot day.

The expanded newsreel, the only other auxiliary attraction, includes the recent interview between Gov. Landon, the Republican Presidential nominee, and Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, and, in one of its Paramount sequences, the first of the motion picture disclosures of the seriousness of the civil war in Spain and the tremendous havoc to property and human life that is being wrought by that bitter conflict.

It seems worth reiterating in conjunction even with so grim a subject as "Secret Agent" that Madeleine Carroll is a very beautiful young woman—and Mr. Lorre one of the cinema's most eminent ogres.

About the Showshops

IN ANOTHER column on this page there should appear the announcement that after Friday, August 14, what is now called Loew's Fox Theater will be known as Loew's Capitol, by edict of a preponderant public vote. This is an odd and unaccustomed vindication of this column's suggestion, before the contest started, that "Capitol," prefixed by the inevitable "Loew's," would not be so bad. There are others, however, who entertain exactly contrary ideas.

BELL.

A large number of communications have reached this desk with regard to the new name for the Fox. I regret to say that a majority of them have been based on considerations of euphemism and poetical and classic fancy rather than upon any understanding of the uses to which theater names must be put in the ordinary business of successfully conducting a place of mass amusement. A theater name must be such as to adapt itself to convenient newspaper and advertising type display in spaces sometimes even less than the width of an ordinary newspaper column; it must conform to the dimensions of the lettering possible on electric signs and marquees. It must, in short, be of sufficient brevity to be adaptable to many practical uses, all of which represent a cash outlay to be charged off to "overhead" and so deducted from the gross box-office receipts and potential earning capacity of the theater.

• • • •

Considerations of this sort, which probably never occurred to many voters who submitted new names in the "primaries" which resulted in the choice of the ten that appeared on the final ballots, automatically eliminated such suggestions as "Loew's National Press Theater," "Loew's Garden of Allah Theater," and others of similar length, proposed by certain correspondents who have displayed dissatisfaction with the names voted upon as "failing to show a high grade of gray matter."

Some disgruntled contestants even have gone so far as to introduce racial prejudices into their communications, which, of course, immediately bars them from serious consideration.

• • • •

Speaking of the Fox reminds me that I can recall no orchestra on any Washington stage that ever presented its program with such complete informality as George Olsen's, the current week's headliner on F street. Not only do the members of the band eschew the music stands, but they even do without chairs! If you notice, the boys practically are sitting on the floor, the slight elevations upon which they play being only of sufficient height to permit a bending of the knees. Not a bad idea, at that. At least, I suspect the man who pays the transportation bills thinks so.

Tonight is the night when a considerable group of ostensibly beautiful young women will submit their charms to the appraising gaze of the board of judges in Al Stern's "Miss Capitol" contest, the winner of which will be Washington's entrant in the annual September Beauty Pageant and "Miss America" contest conducted in Atlantic City from September 8 to 12, inclusive, under the crisp title of the Atlantic City Beauty Pageant and Variety Club Showmen's Jubilee—or something equally as succinct.

One surmises, current publicity enterprises being what they are, that Master Stern has been at some sort of conniving with the Loew forces in persuading the Atlantic City pageant officials to consent to the change of designation of the local winner from "Miss Washington" to "Miss Capitol," as she will be known this year. There is even talk that she will be officially crowned "under the Capitol dome," although that remains to be seen.

At any rate, the preliminary judging will get under way tonight, when between 30 and 40 contestants will participate in the first of the elimination contests. In addition to the drama desks of the local press, the list of judges will include Gene Ford, chairman; Emile Beauvais, nationally known beautician; Dorsey Doniphan, Washington artist, and Madeline Ensign, program director at Radio Station WOL. Among tonight's authorized competitors will be the following:

Cordiene M. Henry, 1434 Harvard street northwest; Tila Mandis, 1616 Kilbourne place northwest; Dorothy Heim, 5206 Kansas avenue northwest; Alma Heine, 928 Upshur street northeast; Kathryn Dengler, 1505 Van Buren street northwest; Kate Heaton, 1213 N street northwest; Alice Evans, 5017 Fourth street northwest; Irene E. Smith, 1607 D street northeast; Rose Ellen Jarvis, 2 Riggs road, D. C.; Mildred Bromley, 3356 M street northwest; Mary Pillotti, 1356 Otis place northwest; Ruth Mullen, 1830 North Capitol street northwest; Ethel Virginia Zepp, 1226 F street northeast; Caroline Donnelly, 1328 North Capitol street northwest; Ruth Carmichael, 1444 W street northwest; Eleanor Mathis, 1124 Tenth street northwest; Ruth Barbour, 1717 I street northwest; Shirley Schwartz, 724 Taylor street northwest; Edna Oliver, 632 A street northeast; Evelyn Fuqua, 3631 Everett street northwest, and Evelyn Thomas, 1811 Wyoming avenue northwest.

At the suggestion of the Atlantic City Jubilee committee, local entries will be accepted by Mr. Stern up until the finals at Chevy Chase Lake on Friday night. So now you know.

• • • •

It is perhaps a little late to comment upon it now—since the review of its predecessor appears on this page—but E. B. Collins was distressed by postcard that someone did not perceive that "Two Against the World," a recent feature at the Metropolitan, was merely a carbon copy of "Five Star Final," with broadcasting substituted for the newspaper "game" as the background. Mr. Collins suggests that "this show should have been spiked on a preview." No doubt—only the drama desks were not accorded any preview of this picture.

• • • •

Addenda.

An ideal program of music and the dance is promised in the National Sylvan Theater on the Monument Grounds tonight. Phil Lampkin is left-handing the orchestra at Loew's Century Theater in Baltimore into tempo for "Spring Is Here" this week. Benny Davis and his "Star Dust Revue," recently at the Earle, open on the Steel Pier, Atlantic City, Friday. "Windmills in Manhattan," the manuscript play by Judith and David Bublick, is in its second capacity week at the Roadside Theater. "To Mary—With Love," new costarring vehicle for Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy—their first since "Broadway Bill"—is being previewed today at 1. The Cue and Curtain Club of Gorge Washington U. plans to open its season with "Post Road." Sort of too warm again, don't you think?

• • • •

Signs-of-the-Times Note.

The best business barometer of the week is in the colloquy between one of the principals and "Schlepperman" in "Florida Special:"

"Hello, how's business?"

"Fine, great, terreefic—but it vill pick up!"

Loew's Capitol Is Name Voted To Replace Fox

Leads Closest Competitor by 4,337 Ballots in a Total of 25,406.

Loew's Capitol is the "people's choice" as the new name for Loew's Fox Theater.

After more than a week of balloting, the Capitol emerged as the winner with a commanding victory, having been the choice of 8,638 voters and beating its nearest opponent, Loew's President, by 4,337 ballots. The President polled 4,311 votes.

Third in this popular election was the Embassy with 4,302 votes, and Marcus Loew, with 2,456 votes, was fourth. Others wound up the race as follows: Capital, 1,652; Congressional, 1,480; Diplomat, 1,160; Nation, 698; Federal, 426 and Union, 311.

Additional $20 to Winner.

Already having won a $5.00 cash prize for having originally proposed Loew's Capitol, Miss Jean Allen, of 5812 Thirty-second street northwest, will receive an additional $20 cash prize as well as a free round trip over the Pennsylvania Airlines to the Great Lakes Exposition in Cleveland. Miss Allen's suggestion was accompanied not only by what was deemed the most logical reasoning, but a most ingenious sketch as well.

The voting was preceded by a week of primaries in which more than 5,000 persons participated. From their suggestions were selected the ten names that were on the ballot. Cash prizes were awarded to nine others in addition to Miss Allen, and some 200 have been invited to attend the planned inaugural of the Capitol the night of Friday, August 14, as guests of the management.

Management Elated.

Loew Division Manager Carter Barron was enormously elated over the enthusiastic participation of Washington theatergoers in this campaign to rename the Fox. His enthusiasm is based on the many letters that have poured in commending the theater for seeking to find a more representative name, and the fact that a total of 25,406 votes were cast.

Immediately upon the conclusion of the tabulations, Mr. Barron executed contracts for a new electric sign that will be unveiled on August 14.

The company which will manufacture this new sign has promised to have it completed and erected by the night of the 14th. That night promises to be a significant one, not alone because of the ceremonies planned for the "birth of the Capitol" but also because it will mark the premiere performance of the fourth annual "Going Native" Revue.

The Gossipel Truth.

Hollywood, Aug. 3.

Eddie Cantor and Sam Goldwyn have come to an agreement. Cantor has obtained a release and is now a free agent . . . George Raft will surprise Virginia Pine when she arrives here, by showing her plans for a house he intends building in Westwood . . . Clifton Webb threw a swanky party for a few friends in a trailer . . . Ketti Gallian and Jack Dunn are seeing each other again for retakes . . . The Robert Floreys are quarreling . . . Florey recently completed the flicker, "Hollywood Boulevard," previewed last week. It is an interesting picture, for it gives the movie fans a peep at the Cinema City they read about.

GRETA GARBO.

Garbo is making "Camille" without a complete script, which is unusual for her . . . The other day on the set Director George Cukor called her and said, "Miss Garbo, I want you to meet your leading man, Robert Taylor." It was their first meeting. "How do," said Robert Taylor, shyly. Next week they'll be doing passionate love scenes.

Many of the All-American football players are working at Radio in the flicker, "The Big Game." . . . Among them are Bobby Wilson, Bill Shakespeare, King Kong Klein, etc . . . Evelyn Prince, one of the stock cuties, was showing them the town. She got home late one morning and her mother said: "Out night clubbing, eh? And I suppose you've been drinking." "No," answered Evelyn, "I was with William Shakespeare." "Get to bed," interrupted her mother. "You've been drinking."

RONALD COLMAN'S ex-wife, Thelma Ray, is in Hollywood, visiting this town for the first time . . . The anonymous article in the Saturday Evening Post titled, "Twice Sold Tales," was written by the talented story editor for United Artists, Merritt Hulbert . . . Mamo Clark, who played the native girl, you certainly noticed, in "Mutiny On the Bounty," is taking English and dramatic lessons at Metro. She's a big attraction about the studio . . . Mervyn Leroy no longer shows double features in his projection room at his house. The guests stay too long . . . Paul Gerard Smith says, "I've just completed a great picture—and we do 'Mickey Mouse' for bows."

The flicker, "Sing, Baby Sing," which features a cross-country chase similar to the John Barrymore-Elaine Barrie episode, was previewed Friday night. It is the funniest musical of the season. . . . Sitting in the audience was Elaine Barrie. . . . After the picture I asked her how she liked it. Miss Barrie said: "I enjoyed it. It's a very amusing picture."

SYNOPSIS.

Eden Faraday, young secretary, opens the door of a taxi and finds a man murdered. She is taken to the police station, where she meets Jack Garnett, newspaper cameraman, and Owen Field, assistant district attorney, who arranges her release. Eden had been mistaken for Gracie Lincoln, a gunman's widow. The man murdered was a notorious gangster, Grappi. Eden's mother, Bridget Faraday, sells gowns and is in love with suave Sidney Creighton. Eden and her spoiled young sister, Robin, and brother, Coburn, depend on their peppery grandmother. Because of rumor that Eden can identify the murderers Owen Field has her guarded. Her mother and Sidney escort Eden to a business appointment. When they leave her she is snatched by two evil looking men but Field and his men rescue her. Field takes her to his mother's home where she is kept secluded.

INSTALLMENT VIII.

Imprisoned.

Eden opened her purse and powdered her nose, turned off the heat, turned to open the door.

The glass knob turned in her hand, but the door did not open. It was locked.

Cold fury was Eden Faraday's first reaction as she tugged at the locked door.

"How dare you?" she stormed at the panels. "This isn't Russia. How dare you do a thing like this to me?"

But the house was silent except for the occasional drip of water in the frigid looking bath. Outside traffic moved quietly, seemingly very far away. Eden regarded the tall windows. They faced another brick wall less than 15 feet away, and on the outside were iron bars set across the sash for half the height of the windows. Obviously Sara Field did not like being disturbed and had taken every precaution against intrusion.

Eden's anger subsided a little and common sense returned. Owen Field was protecting her. That he had taken such a bleak way to do it was not his fault. But for his quick intervention she would now undoubtedly be in a situation too horrible to contemplate.

The man who had clapped his cruel, cold fingers over her mouth in front of the hotel, had had stony looking eyes and a face incredibly cruel. She recalled all the hideous tales she had heard of things that had happened to other girls. A cold tremor ran over her as she realized what she had escaped. She sat down quietly on the prim bed and began to undress.

The bed was cold but deep and comfortable and she slept almost at once.

A thin tapping roused her. She sat up, startled and dazed, with the morning sun warm on her face. Cordie, gaunt, silent and obviously disapproving, was at the door, with coffee, pale toast and oatmeal on a tray. Mr. Field, she reported, wished the young lady to stay in this room. And the door would have to be kept locked. And, added Cordie mournfully, it was a trial to have gunmen and all this lowdown truck dragged right into a person's house, as you might say!

Properly reproved, Eden asked timidly if she could have the paper later.

"Mis' Field don't take papers. If Mr. Owen fetches home any I'll ask him about it."

"Thank you," Eden sugared the very good coffee. "I'm as distressed at making so much trouble for you as you are at having me. I hope I shall be allowed to go home immediately."

"Well, people can't always help the messes they git into," was Cordie's grudging admission, "and then again they can and won't!"

The morning moved along interminably. Sparrows on the wires outside the window became an interesting activity. Eden watched them for an hour, then bathed and wished for clean linen. There was nothing whatever to do. All the chairs were unfriendly, so she lay down on the bed, wrapping herself in the comfort when the radiator cooled. Once she slept fitfully and rousing shed a tear or two.

What were Gran and Robin doing? Of her mother she could be reasonably sure. Bridget, smartly waved and gowned in gray crepe, would be treading the hushed green carpets of her shop, making quiet, authoritative gestures with her lovely hands, speaking in beautifully modulated tones, and women in black satin would be watching her sidelong, hurrying to take down colorful lengths of fabric from cases, bringing out design books, speaking carefully trained French accents, moving their guarded eyes slowly.

And on the amber satin chairs, the idle wives of busy men and others who were not wives, would be sitting, crushing out cigarettes in the chromium trays, trays that small, dark maids removed instantly. The picture was constant, certain, and so was any thought of Gran constant.

Gran was the dependable quantity. Gran moved between kitchen and bedroom, sometimes to market, sometimes to church, sometimes sitting down for a cup of tea with a dowdy old friend. You knew where to find her, you knew what she would do. Movies were not for Gran, who had been Georgia Dryman, the important dramatic actress of the early nineties. Gran was affronted by the jumped-up crudeness of these young things who called themselves actress now, and by the glib, brittle talk that passed for dialogue in these degenerate days.

Gran remembered yet long "sides" of Suderman, Clyde Fitch, "Hazel Kirke;" she had played Trilby and Lady Babbie, done character work in road companies for years. To her, true drama was still sonorous, still a little pompous and strutting. The spectacle of leading ladies in shorts falling into duck ponds was an active offense to Gran.

It was not Gran, but Coburn and Robin that Eden worried about as she lay curled in Mrs. Field's chilly down puff. Coburn and Robin were so different from the other Faradays. They prowled so. They were alien, inclined to be hostile, more than a little sardonic. They were amused by their family, given to small tyrannies and contemptuous reserve that implied sordid secrets. They knew things, Eden was certain, that would have appalled their mother or Gran, for all Bridget's open-mindedness. It was as though all young people reverted now, somehow, became drunk and ribald on a sort of atavistic madness that was half jungle and half were-wolf. And there was nothing that anyone could do about it.

Nothing on earth that any one could do about Coburn and Robin. Time was the only force undashed by their audacity. Time went on remorselessly, turning them into staid, older people. Time would tame their rebellions, rub the edges from their crude outlook on life, give them tolerance and some humility, but time took so long about it.

Eden roused from her heavy speculations when Cordie brought her lunch. The lock snicked behind the servant's grim gray back, the sun moved away from the brick wall opposite, leaving the space between the two buildings in shadow. It was afternoon. Eden curled up and tried to sleep again, when she was sharply awakened by a tap on the glass.

Startled, she jumped up to find herself staring through a window pane, squarely into a pair of eyes and a youthful grin. There, clinging somehow to a ledge outside was Jack Garnett, the news photographer who had brought her coffee that terrible morning—was it only yesterday?

He was tapping on the glass with a cigaret lighter and motioning for her to raise the sash.

The locks were complicated and Eden had a struggle before the heavy sash would rise. Then it slid up a few inches. She dropped on her knees and frowned at Garnett through the aperture.

"How on earth did you get here? You mustn't. Go away at once," she whispered anxiously.

He grinned more widely. "This was easy. I've climbed tougher places plenty of times. A good roof, two rows of bricks, a pipe and this iron business to hang on to."

"But—how did you find out where I was?" she demanded.

"That's my job—finding out where people are hidden. How long is Field keeping you locked up here?"

"I wish I knew. I haven't seen him since last night."

"When he let the palookas who pulled that job get away!"

"That wasn't his fault. The police were too late."

Garnett inched along, clinging to the iron bars. His knuckles were blue-white, a thin drizzle had begun and Eden saw that his hair was beaded with dampness and his hat getting wet.

"Just came around to see if you were all right," he said. "And—I've found a fellow you ought to talk to. He's in this business, too, just like you are—and he wishes he wasn't. Will you go with me to see him when Field turns you loose?"

9 Sentenced for Raid On Newspaper Plant

Wooster, Ohio, Aug. 3 (AP).—Justice of the Peace John G. Vannest sentenced each of nine men today to serve 30 days in jail for unlawfully closing the plant of the Weekly Press at nearby Rittman on July 17.

The Rittman newspaper plant was closed by a group of men the day after publication of an editorial urging employes of the Ohio Boxboard Co., where a strike of the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers is in progress, to return to their jobs. Ernest Harrison, publisher of the paper, said some of the men were pickets at the strike-closed factory.

Scott Winner Over Klick On Points

2,000 See Aggressive Texan Rock Famed Foe With Right.

One Judge Votes Draw; 'Killer' Lamar Is Knockout Victor.

By Bill McCormick.

Cowboy Howard Scott, an importation from the Lone Star State, galloped into the big time at Griffith Stadium last night by winning from Frankie Klick a decision only slightly disputed.

The slight dispute over the decision in favor of the District lightweight champion was occasioned by a draw vote in favor of Klick cast by Judge Frank Schuyler, one of Washington's most dependable official vote casters. Referee "Muggsy" Morris and Judge Charley Dunn balloted for Scott.

A crowd of 2,000 watched the Cowboy zoom up in the national ratings by beating the third-ranking lightweight in the business.

Scott fought undoubtedly the best fight of his career. He was more aggressive than Klick, he punched harder than Klick and, on more than one occasion, he outboxed the clever Californian.

Klick Best at Infighting.

Only at close quarters was Klick clearly Scott's superior. Once they came together, Frankie almost invariably whanged away with a vicious right to the midriff, and at times the eventual loser rammed both hands to Scott's brisket as the Cowboy seemed unable to tie him up.

Excepting when Klick was infighting, Scott did very well for himself. He stabbed Frankie off when Klick attempted to carry the fight and rammed home one vicious right after the other to the head. Scott displayed a remarkable aptitude for creating openings through which he could ram his right to the head and when he decided to set the pace, he got off with flurries that had Frankie ducking and bobbing desperately to keep from being stopped.

Rocks Klick with Right.

Neither fighter was on the floor at any time, but Klick several times was the recipient of right-hand wallops to the head which probably would have dumped a less experienced boxer. Once, Howard spun his high-ranking opponent completely around with a right, then tore in with both hands to the head as Klick wheeled around in an effort to regain his bearings.

In losing, Klick redeemed himself in Washington for a rather flat performance against Tony Canzoneri here last year. Probably realizing he was on the losing end, he battled back desperately when stung, but it just wasn't in him to beat the ambitious, inspired little fighter who only a few months ago came here from Texas a woebegone, hungry figure—and now stands on the portals of the big time.

Lamar Stops Substitute.

"Killer" Lamar made it all knockouts in the supporting card by stopping Huey Turner, of Brooklyn, in the third round of a semifinal scheduled for six rounds.

Turner was a substitute who entered the ring festooned with fat and weighing 213 pounds.

Despite his fat, Turner bounced

Tigers Slam Harder to Win in Only Game Played in Majors.

Detroit, Aug. 3 (AP).—Detroit turned back Cleveland, 9 to 4, in the only major league game played today to shove the Indians ten full games behind the pace-setting New York Yankees.

Nine thousand fans turned out to see Schoolboy Rowe hang up his thirteenth victory of the season. Although nicked for 12 hits, two of them homers by Bill Knickerbocker and Roy Weatherly, the Schoolboy twirled steadily except in the second and seventh innings, when the Indians got next to him for six of their hits.

Harder Sought Fourteenth.

Mel Harder, aiming for his fourteenth win, started for the Tribe. He was ineffective and was removed for a pinch-hitter in the seventh after yielding 11 hits and 8 runs. Bob Feller pitched the seventh and eighth and gave up 2 hits and 1 run.

Cleveland went into the lead in the second by scoring twice, once on Knickerbocker's circuit clout, but relinquished the advantage in the third when the Tigers batted nine men around to score four times.

No Official Cheer For German Stars

Berlin, Aug. 3 (AP).—With every Olympic detail so elaborately organized, it has caused some surprise that as yet there is no officially recognized German yell such as "Rah Rah Rah America" to encourage Nazi athletes in the Olympic games.

So far German athletes have only been urged on with shouts of their names. The Reich's "Sportblatt" printed a number of battle cry suggestions such as "Deutschcland Deutschcland Heil Heil Heill," "All for Germany's Honor," "German Eagle Fly to Victory."

Another, borrowed from the Germanic hero of Siegfried's Smith's song, "Heiao Heiao," was suggested, but the paper points out that as yet no one has invented a spontaneous yell "bursting from the inner consciousness at the moment when popular enthusiasm arises at its highest pitch."

The paper hopes, however, that such a yell will evolve itself naturally when the impulse calls.

Olympic Shot Putting Champion Is Promoted

Berlin, Aug. 3 (AP).—Hans Woellke, of Germany, who set up a new Olympic record yesterday in winning the shot put championship, today was rewarded by Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Nazi air minister. Woellke was named a lieutenant of police, with a special headquarters assignment.

Miles in Lineup Today As Nats and A's Clash

The "accent on youth" policy, abandoned early this season in the frenzy to keep his crippled team in the fight for a first-division berth, again is being attempted by Manager Bucky Harris, as the Nats open a home stand against the Eastern clubs today.

Outfielder Dee Miles, the rookie from Chattanooga, who not deemed good enough for a place on the Nats' roster six weeks ago when he was released, will be in right-field today when Washington meets Philadelphia in the first of a three-game series.

Miles was hurriedly recalled from the Albany Club yesterday when Manager Harris abandoned hope that Cecil Travis could be converted into a passable outfielder after a six-weeks trial.

Travis Back to Infield.

With Buddy Myer still ailing and Red Kress plainly showing the need for rest, Travis has been moved back to his shortstop post for better or for worse, and will play there indefinitely, in success or failure.

Ossie Bluege will be moved over to second base from the shortstop job, where he has been a defensive bulwark, and Kress wil return to the bench.

Harris' recall of Miles was not born exactly in desperation but in the well defined hope that the fleet-footed towhead may blossom as a genuine big league star. An uncertainty on fly balls is regarded as Miles' one drawback. In both the Southern Association and International League he boasted batting averages far over the .300 figure and his speed on the bases has always intrigued Harris.

Confidence in Rookie.

As a gesture of confidence in Miles, Harris has announced that he will play the rookie in the Nats' outfield against both left and right handed pitching. Ben Chapman, in centerfield, is the other outfield fixture. Johnny Stone will play left-field against right-handed pitching and Carl Reynolds and Jesse Hill will share the job against left-handers.

Monte Weaver, who encountered one defeat and one victory in his two starts in the West, featured by a four-hit triumph over the Browns, will face the Athletics in the series opener. The Nats have wone 10 of the 11 games against the Athletics this season.

Max Schmeling Leaves Tomorrow for America

Berlin, Aug. 3 (AP).—Max Schmeling, setting out on his second attempt to bring the world's heavyweight boxing crown to Germany, said tonight he will leave for America Wednesday on the air liner Hindenburg to begin training for his September bout with Champion James J. Braddock.

The fighter said his physical condition is just as good as when he went to America last April to spring one of the biggest surprises in fistic history by defeating the Negro, Joe Louis. He said Braddock woud be harder to beat.

Sabin Defeats Sutter In Two Sets, 6–2, 6–3

Southampton, N. Y., Aug. 3 (AP).—Wayne Sabin, of Los Angeles, Calif., defeated Ernest Sutter, of New Orleans, intercollegiate champion, in straight sets, 6—2, 6—3, today as play got under way in the Meadow Club's annual invitation tennis tournament. Sutter, a top notcher on clay, has been finding it difficult adjusting his shots to a grass surface, and today he was netting and overdriving the ball almost as often as he was hitting it inside the lines.

Marty Karow Named Navy Baseball Coach

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 3 (AP).—Marty Karow, former basketball coach at the University of Texas, will come here on August 13 to coach the Naval Academy baseball team.

Lieut. Comdr. A. C. McFall, graduate manager of athletics at the academy, announced Karow's appointment today. For several years the academy's nines have been coached by a staff of graduate officers.

Karow has not only coached the basketball teams at Texas, but was also assistant coach in baseball and football. He will assist the coaches of football and basketball at the academy.

The new coach was graduated from Ohio State University in 1927, after being fullback and captain of the football team. He has also played professional baseball.

Phil Johnson Is Signed For a Bout at Stadium

Slugging Phil Johnson, 25-year-old Paterson, N. J., heavyweight who stopped Donald (Reds) Barry in two rounds, yesterday was signed by Matchmaker Walter Young to oppose Bob Mitchell, of Brooklyn, in an 8-round semifinal to the George Godfrey-Billy Wells battle at Griffith Stadium August 11.

Johnson is considered one of the most interesting young colored boxers in the game today. Since Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Goldie Ahern will not operate next Monday night, Young will have the field to himself and is attempting to close out some exceptional preliminary bouts.

Hitler Waives Jim Crow Law To Extent of Saluting Owens

By Paul Gallico.

Berlin, Aug. 3.—There was a fine cheer for Jesse Owens today when he stood, olive-crowned, on the victory platform following his Olympic triumph in the 100-meter finals. But candor compels me to report there was even a finer cheer when Osendarp, the Hollander, standing on the same platform, was announced as having come in third.

There was considerable excitement in the press box when it looked as though local Jim Crow rules might be off to honor Negro Owens' victory, and in charge of an official, he was steered towards the box of Chancellor Hitler in which was also seated Herr Streicher, Germany's number one hater. Everybody climbed up on benches to look over the balcony.

However, Owens was merely led below the honor box where he smiled and bowed and Herr Hitler gave him a friendly little Nazi salute; the sitting down one with the arm bent.

Then so as not to give an international offense and start another naval building race, Hitler received the victorious German hammer throwers in private. It seemed like a great deal of fuss about nothing. Owens didn't seem to care. He had that gold medal, the olive wreath on his brow and the little flower pot with the young oak tree that all the winners get.

U. S. Matmen Win 5 of 6 Matches

Millard Leads American Team in Third Round; Scores Two Falls.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Aug. 3.—Five American catch-as-catch-can wrestlers won and lost today in Olympic competition.

Four of the five American victories and the one defeat, that of Ray Dunn, Oklahoma A. and M. heavyweight, by the Swede Nils Akerlind, were scored by falls. Dunn was pinned in 13:30.

Richard Voliva, Bloomington, Ind., middleweight, and Ray Clemons, Central State (Okla.) Teachers light-heavyweight from Duke, Okla., won their first matches of the games by falls. Voliva pinned Vandermeve, of South Africa, in 10 minutes 41 seconds, and Clemons threw Paul Datwyler, of Switzerland, in 14:31.

The other two falls were scored by Francis Millard, featherweight from North Adams, Mass., and Ross Flood, bantamweight from Blackwell, Okla. Millard pinned Norman Morrell, of England, in 8:24, and Flood put Thorat, of India, on his shoulders in 4:50.

Gains Unanimous Decision.

Harley Strong, the Oklahoma A. and M. lightweight from Cushing, Okla., scored the other American victory of the day in a unanimous decision over Gottfried Arn, of Switzerland.

The Olympic wrestling competition is conducted under a complicated point-scoring system. Victory by a fall counts no points against the winner; victory by a unanimous decision counts 1 point against the winner and 3 against the loser; if the decision is not unanimous, the loser is charged with only 2 points. All competitors who have 5 points scored against them after the second round are automatically eliminated.

Millard is the only American now in the third round without a single mark against him. Voliva and Clemons are in the second round with perfect records, and Flood is in the third round with 1 point charged against him. Strong is in the third round with 2 points and Dunn in the second with 3.

Modern Pentathlon (Fencing).

Fred R. Weber, of West Point, N. Y, tied for second with Edouard Deecourt, of France, in fencing competition won by Herman Lemp, Germany. Gotthard Handrick, Germany, fourth in fencing, led the field in two-events scoring with low total of 6½ points. Alfred Starbird, Burlington, Vt., leads Americans with 17 points for seventh place.

Weight Lifting.

Werner Hostin, of France, successfully defended his Olympic light-heavyweight weight - lifting title with a lift of 782.25 pounds, as the two Americans in the competition, William Good, Reamstown, Pa., and John Miller, Salunga, Pa., finished seventh and ninth respectively.

The Ohio State Negro will have an hour's interval in the afternoon between the 200-meter quarter-final trials and the broad jump finals. The semi-finals of the 200 will be run Wednesday.

Henry Cotton Annexes Italian Open Golf Title

Sestriere, Italy, Aug. 3 (AP).—Henry Cotton, British professional, won the Italian Open golf championship today with a 72-hole score of 288, despite the brilliant play of Joe Ezar, Texas trick-shot star. Ezar set a new record for the difficult mountain course with a round of 84 during the tournament, but finished in second place with a 274 total.

2 U. S. Booters Hurt as Italians Capture Rough Game, 1-0.

Attack Referee After Vain Attempt to Put Player Off Field.

Berlin, Aug. 3 (AP).—America's Olympic soccer team literally went down fighting today in losing a 1-0 decision before a crowd of 7,000 including the Italian Crown Prince, Umberto.

Two Americans, George Nemchick, of Trenton, N. J., and Bill Fiedler, of Philadelphia, were injured during a bruising game in which the German referee, Weingaertner, frequently was forced to warn the Italians for rough tactics.

The climax of the bitter struggle was reached early in the second half when Nemchick was kicked in the stomach by one of the Italians. A few minutes later, after the Italians had scored the lone goal of the game, Fiedler suffered torn ligaments in his knee when pushed roughly by Piccini of the rival team.

Italians Attack Referee.

Weingaertner "put the thumb" on the Italian, ordering him from the game. Three times he tried to get Piccini to leave but finally gave up. A half dozen Italian players swarmed over the referee, pinning his hands to his sides and clamping hands over his mouth. The game was formally finished with Piccini still in the line-up.

The crowd jeered the Italians and cheered the Americans most of the way.

The American team manager, Elmer Schroeder, of Philadelphia, said after the game that Fiedler probably would be unavailable for the Americans' post-Olympic tour of Europe but will remain with the squad.

Schroeder said Fiedler's right knee was in bad condition. Nemcheck's stomach region and lower ribs, he said, were bruised but the New Jersey player was not badly hurt.

Schroeder and the whole team took the incident good-naturedly and did not appear to be disturbed by the way in which they were eliminated.

The Point Score

The team point standings in the Olympic track and field events as based on the unofficial basis of 10 points for a first place, 5 points for a second place, 4 points for a third place, 3 points for a fourth place, 2 points for a fifth place and 1 point for a sixth place.

Metcalfe Runs Second to Ohio Negro in Sprint Finals.

Nazi Wins in Hammer Throw With Record Toss for Games.

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

Berlin, Aug. 3 (AP).—American speed ruled the Olympic straightaway today with a succession of smashing triumphs down a rain-drenched stretch before the third straight capacity crowd of 100,000 spectators.

Officials of the International Amateur Athletic Federation ruled out Jesse Owens' world record-breaking performance of 10.2 seconds made yesterday, deciding there was too much of a favoring wind, but they couldn't keep the brown Buckeye Bullet from capturing the 100-meter crown.

Helen Stephens Co-Star.

Owens achieved the first objective in his bid for three Olympic titles—he resumes work in the 200-meter run and the broad jump tomorrow—by beating Ralph Metcalfe, Chicago Negro, by a meter (39.37 inches) in world and Olympic standard-equalling time of 10.3 seconds with Frank Wykoff, Carpenteria, Calif., three-time Olympian, fourth among the six finalists.

The Negro pair, keen rivals for the last two years on American cinderpaths, shared speed honors with the 19-year-old Fulton, Mo., flier, Helen Stephens, who twice shattered the listed world 100-meter record of 11.8 seconds.

She stepped the distance over a heavy track in 11.4 seconds in her first trial and then captured her semi-final test in 11.5, thus decisively breaking Stella Walsh's world standard and spread-eagling her opponents just as decisively as Owens.

The United States increased her point-scoring margin despite the German challenge concentrated in the weight events, in which Teutons won the first two places in record-shattering hammer throw competition.

United States 15 Points Ahead.

Copetition of five men's events—high jump, shot put, hammer throw, 10,000 meters and 100 meters—in the first two days found the Americans amassing 46 points, 30 of which were gained by Negroes. The Germans showed 31¼ points, shading Finland by a point.

Meanwhile, the United States was fortified strongly for tomorrow's features, not only by Miss Stephen's dominance among the women sprinters, but by qualifying all three entries in both the 400-meter low hurdles and the 800-meter flat race.

Glenn Hardin, of Greenwood, Miss., defending champion and holder of the Olympic and world marks, and Joe Patterson, of the United States Naval Academy and Oklahoma City, captured two of the three hurdle trials, qualifying for the semifinal, while Dale Schofield, of Provo, Utah, ran second in his heat, but also made the grade.

John Woodruff, University of Pittsburgh Negro freshman; Harry Williamson, of High Point, N. C., and bespectacled Charles F. (Chuck) Hornbostel, of Evansville, Ind., swept through the second 800-meter tests in which nine qualified for the final. Woodruff, following orders to the letter, raced an amazingly fast first quarter in 52 seconds flat and registered the fastest trial, 1 minute 52.7 seconds.

The final of the 100 meters was the focal point of a day marred by a virtual cloudburst as well as a fist fight during a soccer match lost

Lieut. Greenock, Longden Up, Takes Suffolk Downs Feature

Jockey Rides 4 Winners For Day

2 Boys Are Suspended at Saratoga; Feature Won by Seabiscuit.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 3.—Riding to the form that marked his efforts in the first half of the current Suffolk Downs meeting, Johnny Longden scored four wins to feature the wash day card at that track.

By far his most brilliant effort was in heeling home the favored Lieut. Greenock in the Provincetown Purse, mile and a sixteenth feature of the day. That horse was timed in 1:46 2/5 for the route and paid $5.20.

Kearsage set the pace, ran into trouble when he tired at the far turn, and came on again under a rousing ride by Smith in the stretch to finish second and pay $3.40 for place. Happy Bolivar, the early contention, finished third and paid $3.40 to show. Billi I a trailer in the early going, came strong at the end to finish fourth.

Longden's other victories were scored on Patty Comixa in the first, Bonanza in the fourth, and Last Romance in the seventh.

Seabiscuit Is Winner.

Race Track, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 3 (AP).—"Sunn Jim" Fitzsimmons, veteran trainer, saddled the winner of the Mohawk Claiming Stakes for the second year in a row here this afternoon. The man whose conditioning helped such thoroughbreds as Gallant Fox, Omaha and Granville to reach stardom sent out the Wheatley Stable's Seabiscuit for this thirty-fourth running of the 1-mile feature and the son of Hard Tack easily repeated the victory scored by William Wodward's Gallant Prince in 1935.

An acident occurred in the third race, in which Charlie Kurtsinger, seasoned pilot, who went down with Sunfeathers, and Russell Kastner, apprentice lad, who was thrown from Transit Bird, luckily escaped serious injury. Kurtsinger's mouth was lacerated and a bruise he received on the back made it necessary for the little Teuton to go to Saratoga Hospital for an X-ray. Ira Howard, whose mount, Whichprint, was disqualified out of fourth money, drew a 15-day suspension from the stewards for rough riding, adding to the general turmoil of the 5½-furlong dash. Lee Fallon previously had received a similar suspension, being charged with using unfair tactics astride Good Gamble in the Saratoga Handicap Saturday, which was won by the filly's stablemate, Discovery.

Fireworks Expected Today in Middle-Atlantic Singles Play

Latona Plays Hunter Lott In Feaure

McCue Dows Snyder in Second Round, by 6–2 6–0.

By John B. Vosburgh.

The first real fireworks in the Middle Atlantic tennis championships at the Edgemoor Club are slated for today with such matches as Tony Latona vs. Hunter Lott, of Philadelphia; Nate Ritzenberg vs. Frank Goeltz of Wilkesbarre, Pa.; Dooley Mitchell vs. Tom Moorhead and Gilbert Hunt vs. Davie Johnsen, the scramble for The Washington Post Challenge Bowl assumes explosive proportions.

Only two seeded players saw action yesterday and only one of them finished his match. Lieut. John K. McCue, of Annapolis, seeded No. 4 among the out-of-town players, trounced Gene Sydnor, 6—2, 6—0, in a second-round match and will ace the veteran Stan McCaskey, of the Edgemoor Club, today.

Rickey Willis, former University of North Carolina star and No. 6 seeded player in the Washington group, had taken the first set from Hugh Trigg, 6—2, when the match was called on account of darkness. They will resume at 5 p. m. today.

Goeltz, No. 1 seeded player in the out-of-town ranks, advanced to the third round by default over Carrol Huls, and will face his doubles partner, young Buddy Adair, at 10 o'clock this morning.

Witt Lott seeded No. 3 in the out-of-town ranks and Latona seeded No. 5 although many rate him as high as No. 3, their struggle at 4 p. m. should be more or less of a classic. Lott is one of the ranking players of Philadelphia and the Middle States area but Latona is favored to win today on the basis of Tony's winning the recent Cape May, N. J., tournament in which Lott was one of the high seeded entries.

U. S. Leads in Olympic Track As Sprinters Outclass Fields

by the Americans to Italy, 1 to 0.

The huge crowd, including Reichsfuehrer Adlof Litler, tensely watched every move as the American trio in the sprint toed the marks and broke perfectly. A roar swelled from the vast concrete stadium as Owens took command quickly, led Wykoff by a yard half way down the straightaway, and then stood off Metcalfe's closing rush, winning by a good 4 feet.

Martin Osendarp, of Holland, outlasted Wykoff in a close fight for third place, the dashing Dutchman finishing 3 feet behind Metcalfe, who had to be content with runner-up honors for the second straight Olympiad. The veteran German, Erich Borchmeyer, was fifth. Hans Strandberg, of Sweden, who had been feared by the Americans, pulled a muscle in his right leg and ran last.

Chancellor Hitler exchanged hand waves with Owens, but if there was any move on foot to have the American Negro visit Der Fuehrer's box, nothing came of it.

Regrets Heavy Track.

Jesse spoke over the radio beneath the stands. He said later the track seemed heavy an he regretted there will not be another opportunity to regain the world record taken away from him because the wind exceeded 4 miles an hour.

The hammer throw, ordinarily a boring event, had German fans cheering in frenzied fashion most of the afternoon during the record-smashing battle marked by the failure of the American favorite, Henry Dreyer, of Providence, R. I., to reach the final round.

Karl Hein overcame his countryman, Erwin Blask, for the gold medal, achieving 56.49 meters, 185 feet 4 1-16 inches, on his final throw in the competition marked by four throws bettering Matt McGrath's long-standing Olympic record of 179 feet 8 4-10 inches made in 1912 at Stockholm.

Blask's toss of 55.04 meters, 180 feet 6 31-32 inches, which topped the qualifying rounds, earned second place. Sweden's Oskar Warngard was third at 54.83 meters, 179 feet 10 45-64 inches, also bettering the former record.

The new champion's last three throws successively measured 179 feet 5 19-32 inches, 179 feet 11½ inches and then 185 feet 4 1-6 inches.

Americans Outclassed.

The Americans were off form, but were outclassed and had no alibis to offer. Bill Rowe, of Pontiac, R. I., was fifth with 51.66 meters, 169 feet 5 47-64 inches, and Donald Favor, of South Gray, Me., took sixth with 51.01 meters, 167 feet 4 11-16 inches. Dreyer's best throw was 165 feet 5 5-64 inches.

Miss Stephens dominated the women's sprints in which she and her teammate, Annette Rogers, of Chicago, joined three Germans and Poland's defending champion, Stella Walsh, for the finals tomorrow.

The Missourian beat Jennette Dolson, of Canada, by 10 meters in the first trial in 11.4, clipping four-tenths of a second off Miss Walsh's world mark, half a second off the Pole's Olympic mark and two-tenths of a second off her own American standard which has not yet been accepted internationally.

The American led Elfriede Krauss, of Germany, by a good 7 meters in the semifinal, clocked in 11.5. Miss Walsh was a close runner up to Germany's Marie Dollinger in the second semifinal as both were clocked in 11 seconds flat with Miss Rogers third. Harriet Bland, of St. Louis, the other American sprinter, was eliminated in the first trials.

Woodruff's 7-league strides featured the 800-meter semifinals, prefacing a preliminary sweep making the Americans favorites to capture the event for the first time since 1912, when Ted Meredith, now here coaching the Czechoslovakians, beat the world's best.

The Negro, after an erratic race yesterday, in which he ran third in his heat behind Gerald Backhouse, of Australia, and Miklos Szabo, of Hungary, was told to go to the front with the crack of the gun.

He obeyed instructions so emphatically that he led anywhere from 20 to 40 meters most of the way, finally breaking the tape 20 meters ahead of Kasimierz Kucharski, of Poland.

American coaches think that Italy's Mario Lanzi, who ran second to Hornbostel's 1:53.2, was playing possum along with Kucharski. Both are likely to be tough to beat.

Williamson won the most exciting heat, outrunning Backhouse and the veteran Phil Edwards, of Canada, in a blanket finish, as only one-tenth of a second separated the American at 1:51.1 and Backhouse and Edwards, who were timed at 1:52.

British Supremacy Ends.

At any rate, Great Britain's post-war dominance of the 800 apparently is gone. Brian MacCabe, Britain's only representative among the nine finalists is not in the same class with such former champions as Douglas Lowe and Tom Hampson, 1932 winner and record holder at 1:49.8.

Competing after the heaviest shower and when the track was in its sloppiest condition of the day, the American 400-meter hurdlers contented themselves with qualifying under wraps among the dozen advancing to tomorrow's deciding competition.

Hardin and Patterson won their heats respectively in 53.9 and 54.4 seconds, while Schofield was clocked in 54.8 in running a little less than a meter behind Germany's Fritz Nottbrock.

Miguel White, of the Philippines, won the fastest of six heats in 53.4 and Jozsef Kovacs, of Hungary, showed good form in winning in 53.7, but the Americans look to have control.

Steeplechase in Rain.

As though the obstacle course, including a water jump, was not tough enough, the 3,000 meter steeplechasers were accompanied by another downpour of rain. Three heats qualified a dozen for the finals next Saturday.

The American trio survived the competition in which times meant nothing but the Finns showed enough to warrant the prospect of duplicating their 10,000 meter sweep of yesterday.

A. Ritzenberg Defeated by 6-4 and 6-1

Culver, Ind., Aug. 3 (AP).—Seeded players in both divisions raced through their matches as expected today in the opening of the National Junior and Boys Tennis tournament on the courts of the Culver Military Academy.

Among the players making impressive debuts was Harry Heffner, of St. Louis, who eliminated Albert Ritzenberg, of Washington, 6-4, 6-1. Ritzenberg is Middle Atlantic junior champion. It was a second round match, Ritzenberg drawing a bye for the first round.

Joe Hunt, of Los Angeles, runner-up last year and seeded first in this year's tournament, drew a first round bye and then romped through his second round match by whipping Hamilton Frost, of Nashville, Tenn., 6-1, 7-5.

Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, seeded second, scored an even easier win over Delbert Brannon, of Evanston, Ill., 6-1, 6-2. Other favorites to win their early matches were Isadore Bellis, of Philadelphia, national boys' champion last year; Russell Boddit, of Atlanta; Julius Heldman, of Hollywood, Calif.; Melvin Lapman, of New York; Seymour Greenberg, of Chicago, and Morey Lewis, of Texarkana, Ark.

Scott Beats Klick, On Split Decision

off the floor numerous times and on several occasions tested Lamar's ability to absorb punishment by ramming home fairly stiff wallops to the head and midriff. He finally went the way of all flesh in the long run, folding up and forcing his seconds to send the towel fluttering into the ring.

Lou Nova, Roy Carlin's heavyweight prospect from the Coast, scored a second-round technical knockout over Valento Brown, a last-minute substitute for Johnny Daniels, in a preliminary scheduled for six rounds.

Nova floored Brown who, at 179, was outweighed 14 pounds, was on the floor three times before his seconds finally threw in the towel after 1 minute and 45 seconds of the round.

Buddy Scott, Howard's big 20-year-old little brother, made an auspicious debut in local rings by scoring a second-round technical knockout over George Cox, former District Golden Gloves champion. Buddy battered George almost at will for two rounds, sending him to the floor for nine in the second and beating him so badly that his seconds were forced to toss in the towel after 2 minutes and 40 seconds.

Kid Howie, Alexandria lightweight, scored a quick knockout over Jack Rogers, of Baltimore, in a colored opener scheduled for four rounds. Rogers bit the dust after only 1 minute and 23 seconds.

Two special four-rounders were arranged by Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn to make up for the sourness of the regular preliminaries occasioned by two last-minute substitutions.

In them, Mickey Page, a Providence lightweight, won a unanimous decision from Bobby Dechter, and Sammy Sweet and Doug Swetnam worked to a draw.

Walper Is Tied In Sweeps With 71

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Aug. 3.—Bill Schreiber, host to the golfers of the Middle Atlantic Professional Golfers Association and their amateur partners, in their regular am-pro tournament at Mount Pleasant today, shared in the ward of two prizes, as did Carroll MacMaster, Woodholme pro. Amateurs were accorded half their handicaps.

Schreiber teamed with Joseph J. Walsh to score a best-ball of 64, as did MacMaster with Walter Greiner, semifinalist in the National Public Links tournament. Schreiber and his brother, Joe, with a net of 67 took fourth prize, and MacMaster with Otto Greiner tied for fifth.

MacMaster also tied with Leo Walper, of Bethesda, in the simultaneous pro sweepstake, each playing the municipal championship course in par figure 71.

The tournament drew one of the largest fields similar events have seen. Fourteen pros and their various partners took part.

With seven strokes and Schreiber's help, Walsh's card for best ball showed nothing over a 4 and a total of 30 on the difficult back nine.

Condition of Bob Tow Worse; May Face Knife

The condition of Bob Tow, Alexandria heavyweight, who was sent to the hospital Saturday for an injury believed to be a pulled ligament in the pelvic joint, was much worse last night.

Tow's temperature reached 105.4 and physicians now believe he is suffering from a pulled ligament in the sacro-iliac, with a possible abscess. It may be necesary to operate to determine the extent of the injury as abscesses do not show up under an X-ray examination.

Tow had been tentatively scheduled to fight Billy Nichy at Griffith Stadium August 17, but undoubtedly will be forced to cancel that engagement.

Although two under par himself with a 71, Guldahl was unable to keep the furious pace Smith set, largely through his deadly putting.

Smith bagged five birdies on each nine of the par 37-36—73 Inglewood course.

Out Fishin' . . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

Anglers made a regular clean-up of every available container for their catches over the week-end. General stores were sold out of sacks, sugar cans and bushel baskets. Most of the ice plants held their catches overnight and assisted with the final packing before the trek back home.

Saturday and Sunday nights were beautiful on the calm waters of the Chesapeake and its tributaries. The cloudless sky, with its silvery moon shining its reflection down in a sheath of radiant white added zest to every angler's satisfaction, catching as many fish as they wanted and under ideal conditions. Both nights were made for fishing and romance. Everybody was "mooning."

The waters in the vicinity of Point Lookout Light resembled a small lighted village, so many were the boats engaged in fishing for croakers and trout

General Motors Declares Extra 75c Dividend

Int. Nickel and Indiana S. O. Also Add to Payments.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 3.—Directors of General Motors Corporation today ordered an extra dividend of 75 cents a share on the common stock, in addition to the regular quarterly payment of 50 cents.

In the previous quarter a similar regular and extra payment was made. Extras of 50 cents on December 12, 1935, and 25 cents on September 12, were paid along with the regular quarterly rate.

The regularly quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share on the $5 preferred stock also was declared. The common dividends are payable September 12 to stock or record August 13. The preferred is payable November 2 to stock of record October 5.

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—Directors of International Nickel Co. of Canada, boosted the dividends today to 35 cents quarterly on the common stock. In the preceding quarter a dividend of 30 cents was paid and six months ago a 25-cent payment was ordered. The latest quarterly rate is the highest since the merger with Mond Nickel Co., and the organization of the present concern late in 1928. Today's dividend is payable September 30 to stock of record August 31.

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—Directors of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana today declared an extra dividend of 25 cents on the common and the regular quarterly disbursement of 25 cents, both payable September 15 to stock of record August 15. On June 15 an extra of 15 cents was paid.

Edward G. Seubert, president, said, "on the basis of earnings for the past six months, as now approximately known, the extra payment was justified."

Loading of revenue freight in the first 30 weeks this year—January 1 to July 25—was greater than in any corresponding period since 1931, J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, announced yesterday. Total loading of all commodities in that period this year amounted to 19,416,417 cars, an increase of 2,030,816 cars, or 11.7 per cent above the corresponding period in 1935 but a decrease of 2,628,800 cars or 11.9 per cent compared with 1931.

For miscellaneous freight, which includes manufactured products, the total for the 30 weeks' period this year was 7,724,793 cars, an increase of 15.6 per cent above the corresponding period last year, while for merchandise less-than-carload-lot, it was 4,636,925 cars, or an increase of four-tenths of 1 per cent above last year.

Corn Continues Upward Flight To 11-Yr. Peak

September at 1.09; Wheat Advances 4⅛ Cents at Winnipeg.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—Increasingly sensational adverse crop conditions on both sides of the Atlantic, with a market crisis probable in filling September corn contracts, skyrocketed grain values anew today. The entire list of grains overtopped previous peak prices, some unequaled before in 11 years.

Corn in Chicago soared 3¾ cents a bushel, and wheat at Winnipeg 4⅛ cents. Disturbing possibilities of transatlantic political complications continued to stimulate buying ardor in regard to all grains.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Irregular in Less Active Trading; Bonds Steady; Wheat and Corn Higher.

New York, Aug. 3.—Dog days developed the security markets with dullness, but could not bring on real weakness. Bonds were quiet and steady. Stocks were irregular, but the majority were slightly better at the close. Grains had another buoyant day, especially corn, which reached a new top. September wheat at Chicago closed ⅞ of a cent higher at 113¼ cents a bushel.

Opening prices for stocks were mostly at moderately higher prices, but sales volume was so slack that price movements soon were lost in the slack water of lethargic buying and selling. A handful of stocks managed to move up without much trouble, among them being Boeing, Douglas and Sperry in the airplane group.

Steel shares were firmer than most of the market, the so-called independent stocks leading. Gulf States, Sloss Sheffield and Youngstown were favorites. U. S. Steel and Bethlehem were barely steady. Rubber company stocks continued active and higher. Conferences held for the elimination of certain competitive practices, the good report of Goodrich and rising consumption helped that section.

Farm implements were mixed. Case recovered 4 points from its Saturday break, but others were dull. General Motors held fractionally higher all day, some traders being willing to bet a little that a higher dividend might be voted by the directors at their meeting after the close of the market. Chrysler dipped 2 points.

Philip Morris in Demand.

Tobacco shares moved higher. Philip Morris held its leadership. Some of the merchandising shares stiffened. Coca-Cola dipped a little in spite of a good earnings statement when the directors failed to increase the dividend. Unusual strength was shown by American Telephone, which climbed 3½ points at the best.

Those who continued to take an interest in the stock market could find little news of great importance in the day's report. The steel industry is swinging through the summer with little change in its comparatively high operating rate. This week the rate will decline slightly, from 71.5 to 71.4 per cent of capacity, but prospects for the autumn are brighter, according to one reviewer, and the unfilled orders are sufficient to maintain the present pace for a while.

With more evidence at hand on the earnings of industry and the railroads for the first six months, the improvement over the corresponding period of previous years since the depression began to be felt looks impressive. It would not sustain the stock market if the trend now had turned downward, but apparently the recovery is continuing, and in any event the outlook is good for further dividend increases.

Looking abroad the position is not so firm. Fighting between the radicals and the conservatives in Spain continues, and the issues are now clearly enough drawn to make it certain that victory for those now in power would mean a considerable forward push in Europe for the cause of communism in one form or another. Assuming that such a movement would not get far in this country, once the European nations begin to confiscate on a grand scale private property, our markets would soon feel the deflationary effects.

Odd Lots.

Somebody tried to do something in a big way with Continental Motors. In considerable activity the price was pushed up a fraction, but a large percentage of gain, leaving it about three-fourths of the way up to its best price of the year. Shortly after noon it was announced that the company had received large engine orders from an aircraft company. . . . If Johns-Manville's profit rate of second quarter and its volume is maintained during the remainder of the year, about $4 a share may be shown for the stock.

Building companies, incidentally, think the $25,000,000 or so the Government has spent in urging home building has been sunshine, rain and fertilizer for their business, but they are resigned to footing part of the bill in the end as increased taxation.

Rights.

The ticker tape was relieved of some long quotations and, in the case of Douglas, a good deal of space in the recording of sales of rights. Suspension of trading came at noon for rights of Douglas, National Aviation and United States Hoffman Machinery. Lively trading in Douglas and National rights for cash took place in the first two hours, but Hoffman didn't appear. The suspension of the trio leaves the exchange with three issues of rights: E. G. Budd, Graham-Paige and Philip Morris.

Mobilization.

The government of France has decreed that Frenchmen must report all their foreign holdings of securities and cash. Such proceedure, common only in times of war or during the regime of a dictator hard pressed for credit, usually precedes abandonment of a free gold standard, in one way or another, and presages the mobilization of cash and securities by the government from the hands of private owners.

Pesetas.

A group of foreign exchange men gathered at one of the commercial banks this afternoon to resume the discussions, adjourned last Friday, in regard to contracts made by the banks for delivery of pesetas which could not be fulfilled because of the banking moratorium in Spain. The moratorium was to expire late today, but few expected it to be lifted. So far as regards contracts made between American banks and Spanish banks, the general opinion seemed to be that the banks should merely await developments. The main question was what to do about payments of pesetas to commercial firms who had bought them for future delivery. If it were possible to deal in exchange for a brief period—say two hours, should the banks execute orders and risk getting landed with blocked exchange or should they await the clearing of the situation? Some quotations for pesetas were made today around 13.65 cents, little changed since the last previous quotation, but the rate quoted was nominal.

Needy Farmers.

Pity the poor farmer, leaning heavily against Uncle Sam's shoulder and crying into his pants' pocket. The J. I. Case Co. is sending round lovely rotogravures of its "Centennial Plow," and appearances are mightily deceptive if the huge farm tractors are not equipped with pneumatic tires. The only bit of modern luxury lacking is a cocktail lounge at each end of the furrow.

Railroading.

"Every railroad man is a customers' man," W. J. Harahan, president of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, says in a message to employes in the road's magazine. In the bad old days of railroad mismanagement and stock market jugglery, some men in directorial positions were said to have risen from the ranks.

B. F. Goodrich Plans to Issue New Preferred

Rubber Company Seeks to Meet Arrears of $10,300,780.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 3.—Details of a plan for readjustment of the capital stock of the B. F. Goodrich Co., maker of tires and rubber goods, with its main plant at Akron, Ohio, were submitteid to shareholders today in a letter signed by J. D. Tew, president, and David M. Goodrich, chairman.

The plan was drafted to meet $10,300,780 in dividend arrears on preferred stock and to remove an annual retirement provision in the senior stock. It calls for creation of a new class of $5 preferred stock and exchange of the existing $7 preferred into the new senior stock and common shares.

At the same time the company estimated its consolidated profits for the first six month at $2,650,000 compared with net earnings of $1,553,040 in the first half of 1935. After allowance for preferred dividend the half-year estimate was equivalent to $1.40 on the common against 45 cents for the 1935 period.

Coca-Cola Profits Rise.

Coca-Cola Co., with plants in 13 cities throughout the country and headquarters at Wilmington, Del., reported for the June quarter net income, after charges, Federal income taxes and class "A" dividend requirements, of $5,477,706, equal to $1.37 a common share. In the preceding quarter net income was $2,660,067, or 66 cents a share, and in the 1935 June quarter, $3,972,176, or 99 cents, based on present outstanding shares. No provision was made for undistributed profits tax.

American Locomotive Cuts Loss.

Showing a reduction in net operating loss to $175,625 from $772,225 in the first six months of 1935, American Locomotive Co. in the half-yearly report released today disclosed a large increase in unfilled orders. Bookings at July 1 totaled $8,920,005, compared with $4,262,937 on January 1 and $3,813,246 a year ago. Orders for 39 locomotives were on books as of July 1, against 19 at the start of the year.

Norie-Miller, S. Norie-Miller, C. F. R. Ogilby, Alexander K. Phillips, Douglas R. Phillips, Frederick Richardson and George W. White.

Five New Oil Stations Under Way East of Suez

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—The California-Texas Oil Co., Ltd., recently formed to carry on the marketing and producing operations east of Suez of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana and Texas Corporation, is constructing five new distributing stations, James A. Moffett, chairman, announced today. The stations are being built at Hongkong, Shanghai, Suez, Columbo and Manila, and will be completed by the first of the year, he said.

Engineers of the company are also surveying the east in preparation for the building of a completely co-ordinated system of stations for marketing and serving gasoline and kerosene, Moffett added.

Record estimated steel employment at nearly 500,000 workers.

Peak output of electric power; latest week shows a 14.5 per cent increase over 1935.

Highest weekly freight carloadings this year at 731,062, gain of more than 135,000 over a year ago.

New freight cars on order July 1 reported highest since 1929.

Pennsylvania's Jobless Girding For Last Stand

To Insist on $100,000,000 for Relief; Senate Aids Tear Down Signs.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 3.—Employes of the State Senate ripped down banners of the "jobless army" late today, while leaders of the pickets rallied reinforcements for a last-ditch fight for $100,000,000 relief.

Officials of the Senate said the streamers and flags, bearing crudely painted signs calling upon "the workers" to "fight for your rights;" "we are starving, sock the rich and feed the poor," and a variety of appeals and threats, were removed because the 14-week special session is to end this week.

They pointed out that the assembly is pledged to enact a $50,500,000 tax program of which $45,000,000 would be spent for relief.

However, leaders of the jobless served notice that they would insist upon $100,000,000, or 64 cents per day per person for every one of the State's more than 600,000 unemployed. That would be about twice as much as they now receive.

Officials of the State emergency relief board said the $3,000,000 transferred from special funds for emergency relief last week probably would be exhausted in the next day or so. Some members of the Legislature predicted further funds would be transferred without controversy because the tax program has been agreed upon.

Heretofore the Earle administration has fought transfers from special funds, pending enactment of the revenue measures.

New delegations of unemployed came in today and capitol guards said some were from New Jersey and Delaware.

The unemployed said they would picket the Senate with "new vigor." For almost two weeks, several hundred men, women and a dozen or more small children have "occupied" the Senate gallery, dividing their time between singing and cheering, and jeering and booing the senators. They have eaten and slept in the balcony and twice have attempted to "rush" the senate floor.

Mrs. Andrews Dies; Was Noted Author

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 3 (AP).—Mrs. Mary R. Shipman Andrews, whose story "The Perfect Tribute" has become a classic narrative about Abraham Lincoln, is dead.

First printed in Scribners' in 1905, it later was published in book form and sold 600,000 copies.

"The Perfect Tribute" tells of Lincoln's return from Gettysburg, where he delivered his renowned address. Fearful it had been a failure, the story goes, he starts for a walk alone.

He meets a young boy who says his brother, a Confederate soldier, is dying in a Washington prison hospital. He needs a lawyer to make his will.

Lincoln, without identifying himself, goes to the hospital, Mrs. Andrews writes. The prisoner, unable to see his caller, tells excitedly about the wonderful address the President had made. Lincoln finally realizes that he did not fail, after all.

Former Envoy Of Egypt Dies; Here 4 Years

Mahmond Samy Pacha Served as Minister to U. S. in 1925-29.

Word was received here yesterday of the death in Cairo, Egypt, of Mahmond Samy Pacha, former Egyptian Minister to the United States. The former diplomat, who was 60 years old, died at his home in Cairo's suburban Garden City July 17. He had been in ill health for more than a year. One of Egypt's wealthiest and most distinguished business men, the Pacha served as an undersecretary in the Egyptian department of justice before being appointed to represent his nation in Washington in 1925.

Judge Gives Woman Chair; Assails Law

Chicago, Aug. 3 (AP).—The first woman to be sentenced to the electric chair in Illinois was condemned today by a judge who also condemned the law which demanded her life.

"The life for a life philosophy is a relic of feudalism," asserted Judge Robert C. O'Connell in setting October 29 for the execution of Mrs. Mildred Mary Bolton, 46, confessed slayer of her broker husband, Joseph.

"That a debt to society can be paid by a human body chilled by death is a philosophy encrusted with social nudity," the jurist continued. "The conception that capital punishment has a salutary effect and acts as a deterrent to crime is a much mooted question.

"We have discovered no ideal crime-free state where the corrosive passion of jealousy, hate, envy and the attendant evils are non-existent."

Although "capital punishment is repugnant to the court's reason and spiritual convictions," the judge said he had no choice in the matter since "the jury has willed the extreme punitive measure, death."
